Mallrice

As he walked down the sandy beach on one of those warm, spring days that are so rare in Bellevue, Washington
he could feel the cool sand
ooze between his toes.
His thoughts flashed back to Newport High and the year that was about to end–
–what he had hoped for
and what had happened.
His daydreams were broken by a sharp pain at his back. As he quickly whipped his head around he saw that it was an old friend.
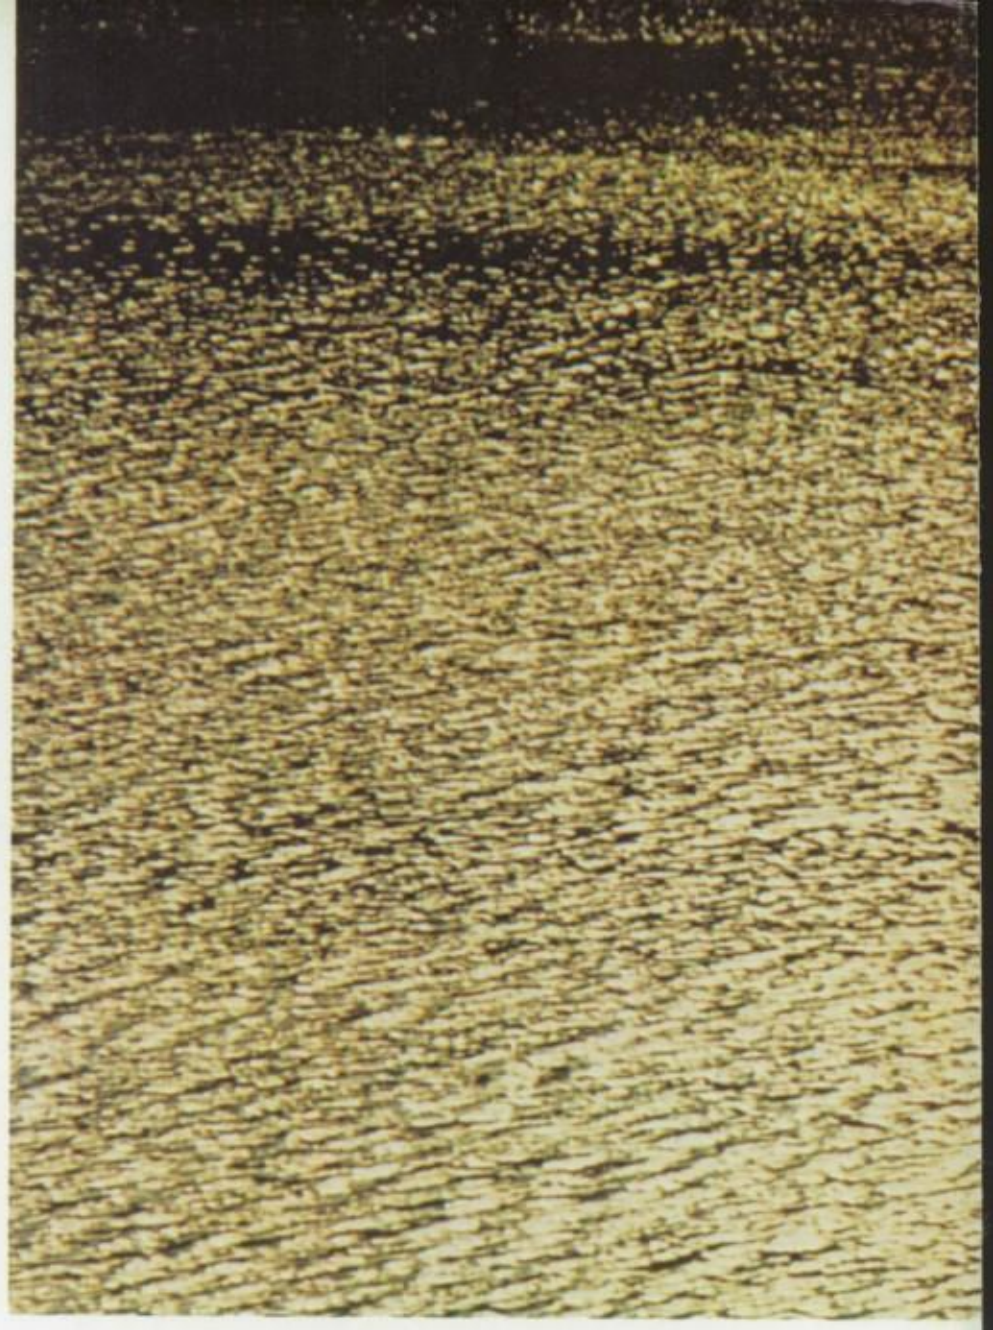
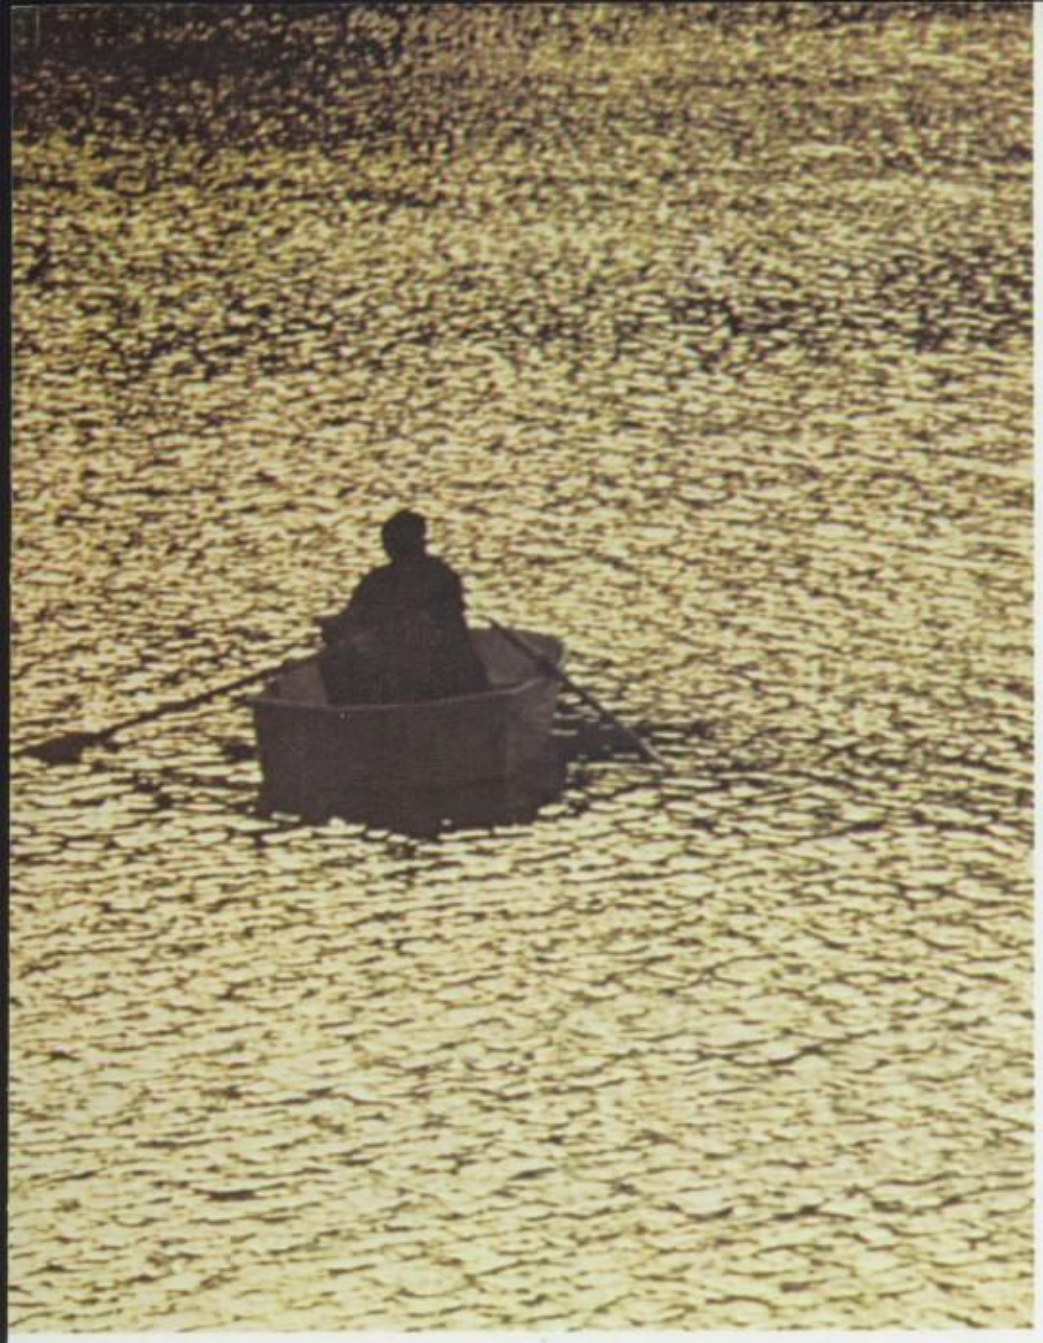
As they continued to walk
they began reminiscing, and. . .

'I wonder if that old man
ever caught anything.'

'I don't know. Hey,
speaking of catching,
didn't you know the
guy who caught
it for punching out
the ceiling tiles?'

'Ya, I don't think
I'll ever forget that.'





'Hey, who's that chick over there?'

'Oh, she was in my English class. She's kinda quiet.'

'Ya know what?'

'What?'

'I still wonder if that old man ever caught anything.'

'Anyway, what did you do last summer?'

'Oh, not much, just messed around.'

'Did you hear about the game out at the field yesterday?'

'Naw, who won?'

'We didn't keep score.'

'I don't know what to think about
this year's football team;
we lost a lot of good
seniors last year.'

'We'll be all right.
We lose a lot of good seniors every year.'

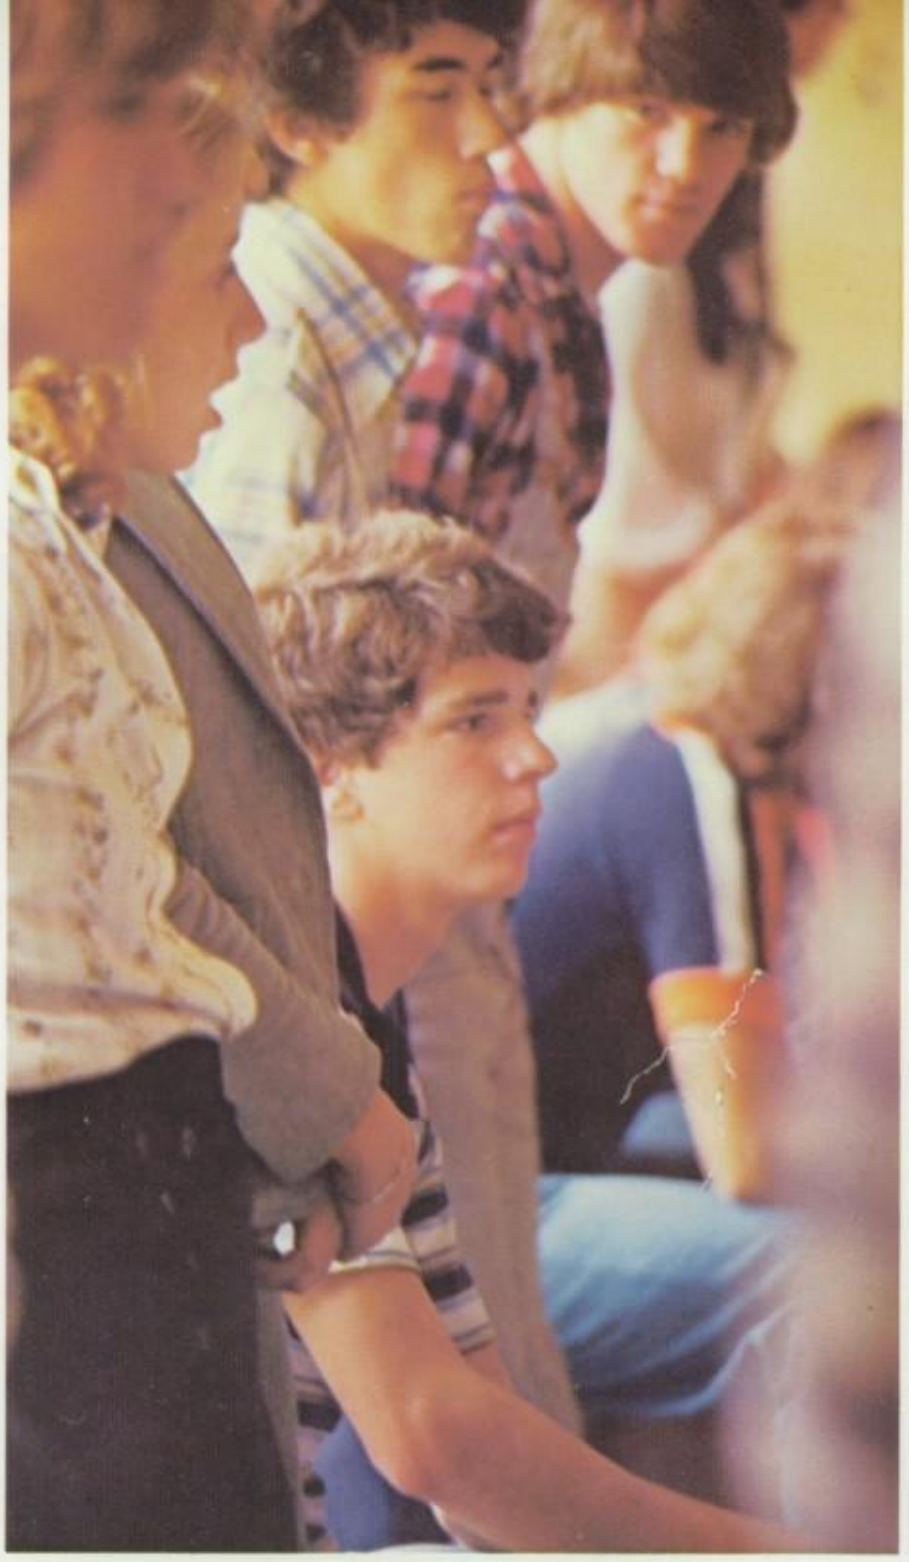
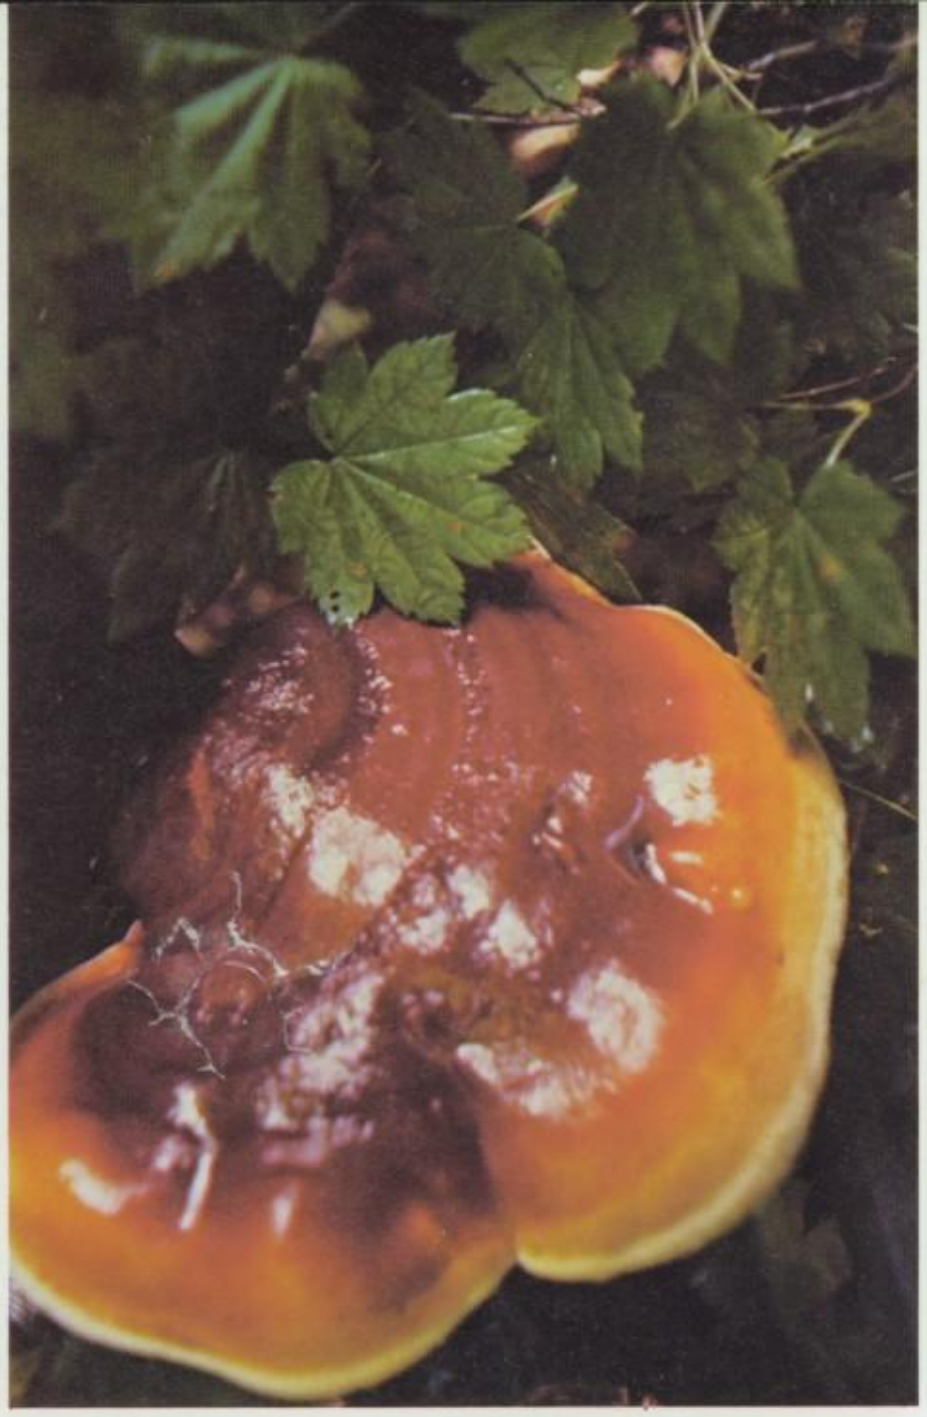
They slowed their pace,
rounded the tip
of the point,
and sat on the craggy
surface
of some driftwood.





For a moment there
was silence.
He noticed a small,
delicate flower
striving to reach sunlight through some stones.

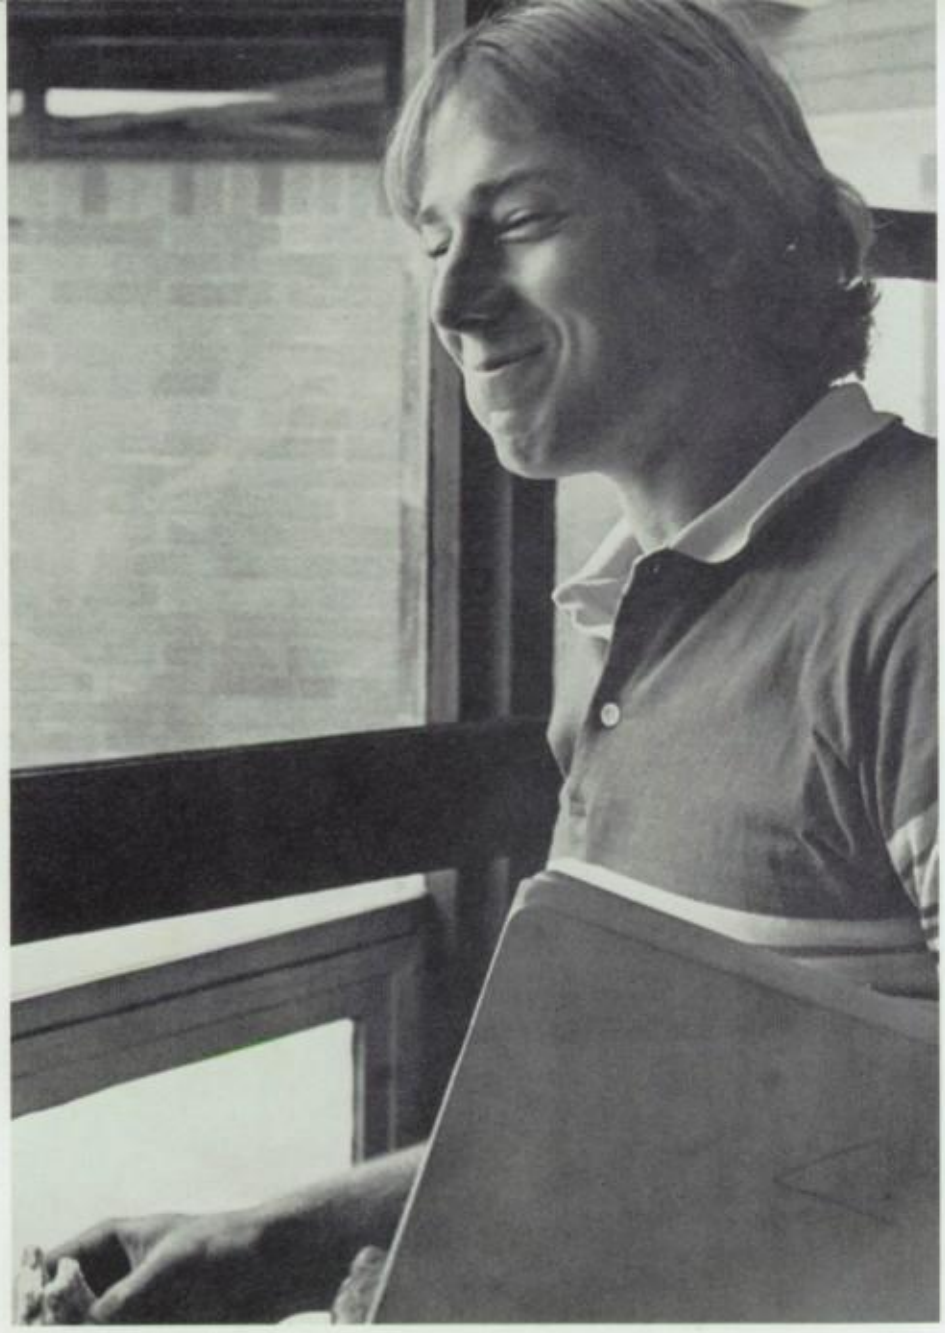
'Ya know, when I was a soph
I used to think
the juniors and seniors
were not only older
but wiser—
—but now it's different.'

'Ya, I remember—'



'How about the time
we raided Mac's?'

'And the time after Homecoming.
Now that was a blast!'

'Ya, but not so good as the times we'll have
during Winter Break.'

'Really!'

'That is—if we get any
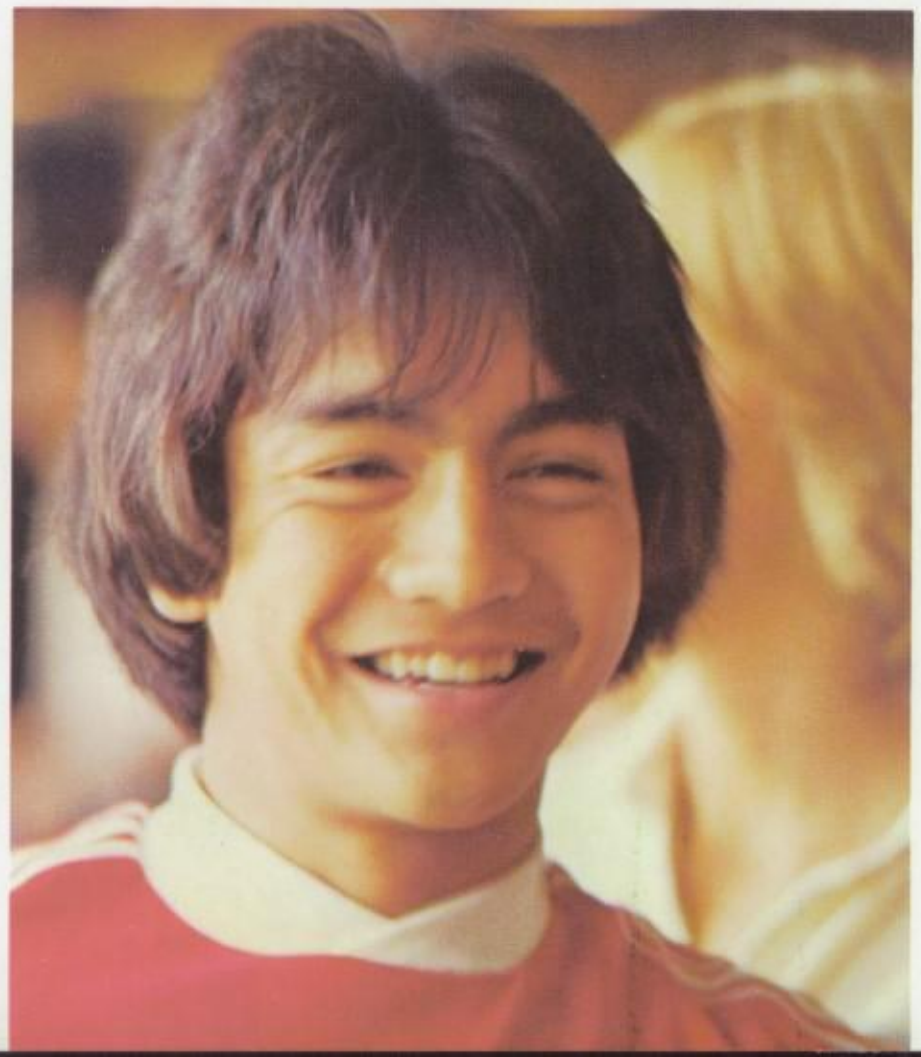
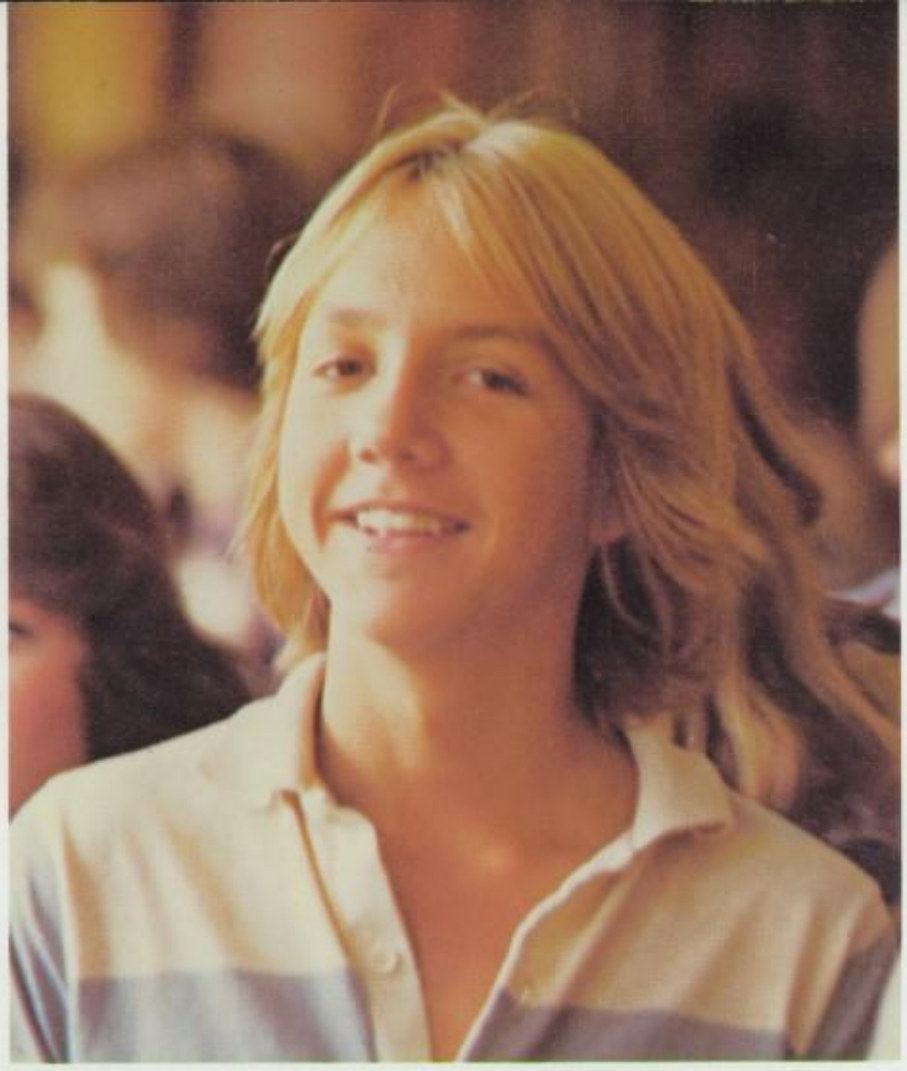
snow this year.'





'The one thing I
look forward to most
is the days we spend at the lodge
up at the slope.'

'The fireplace in the middle
is all right!'

'By the way,
do you remember
all the crazy things we used to do?
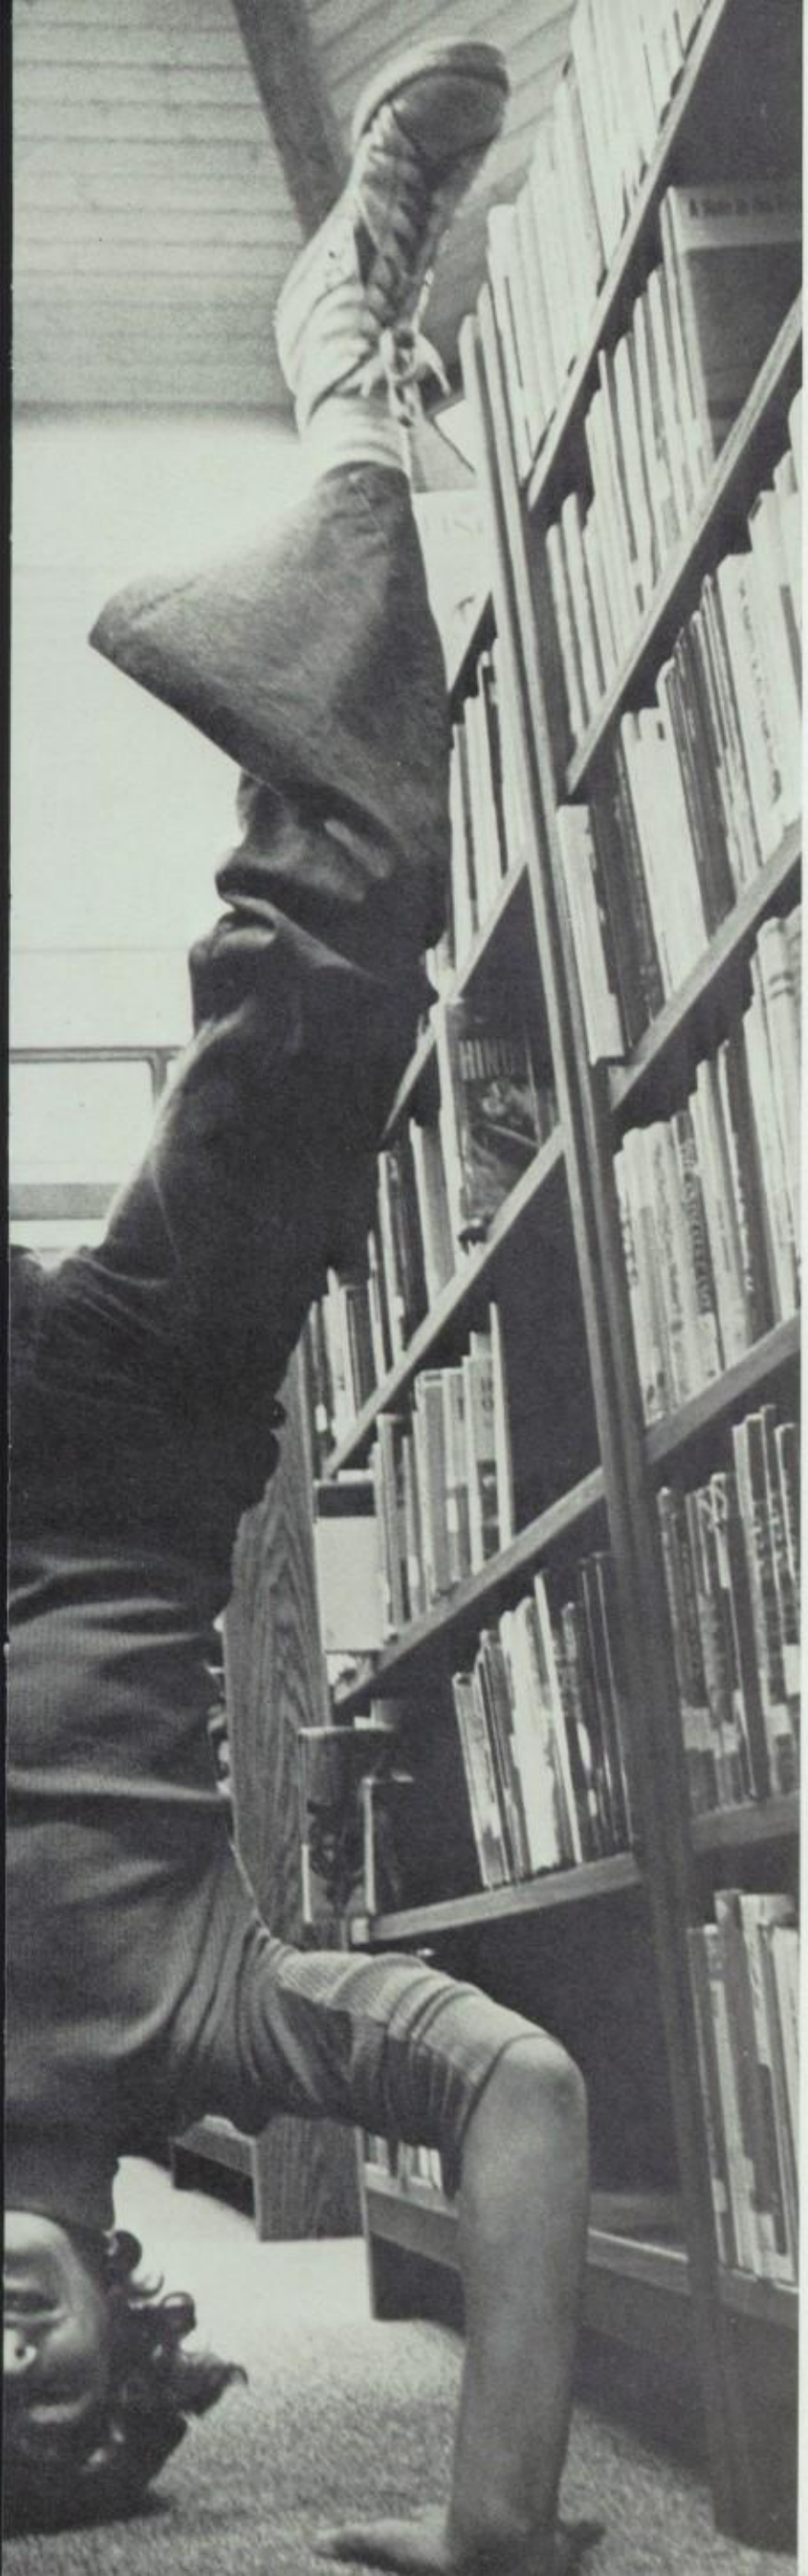
How 'bout the time
we TP'd Bellevue!'

'Ya, and there was 80 percent
chance of rain
that night!'

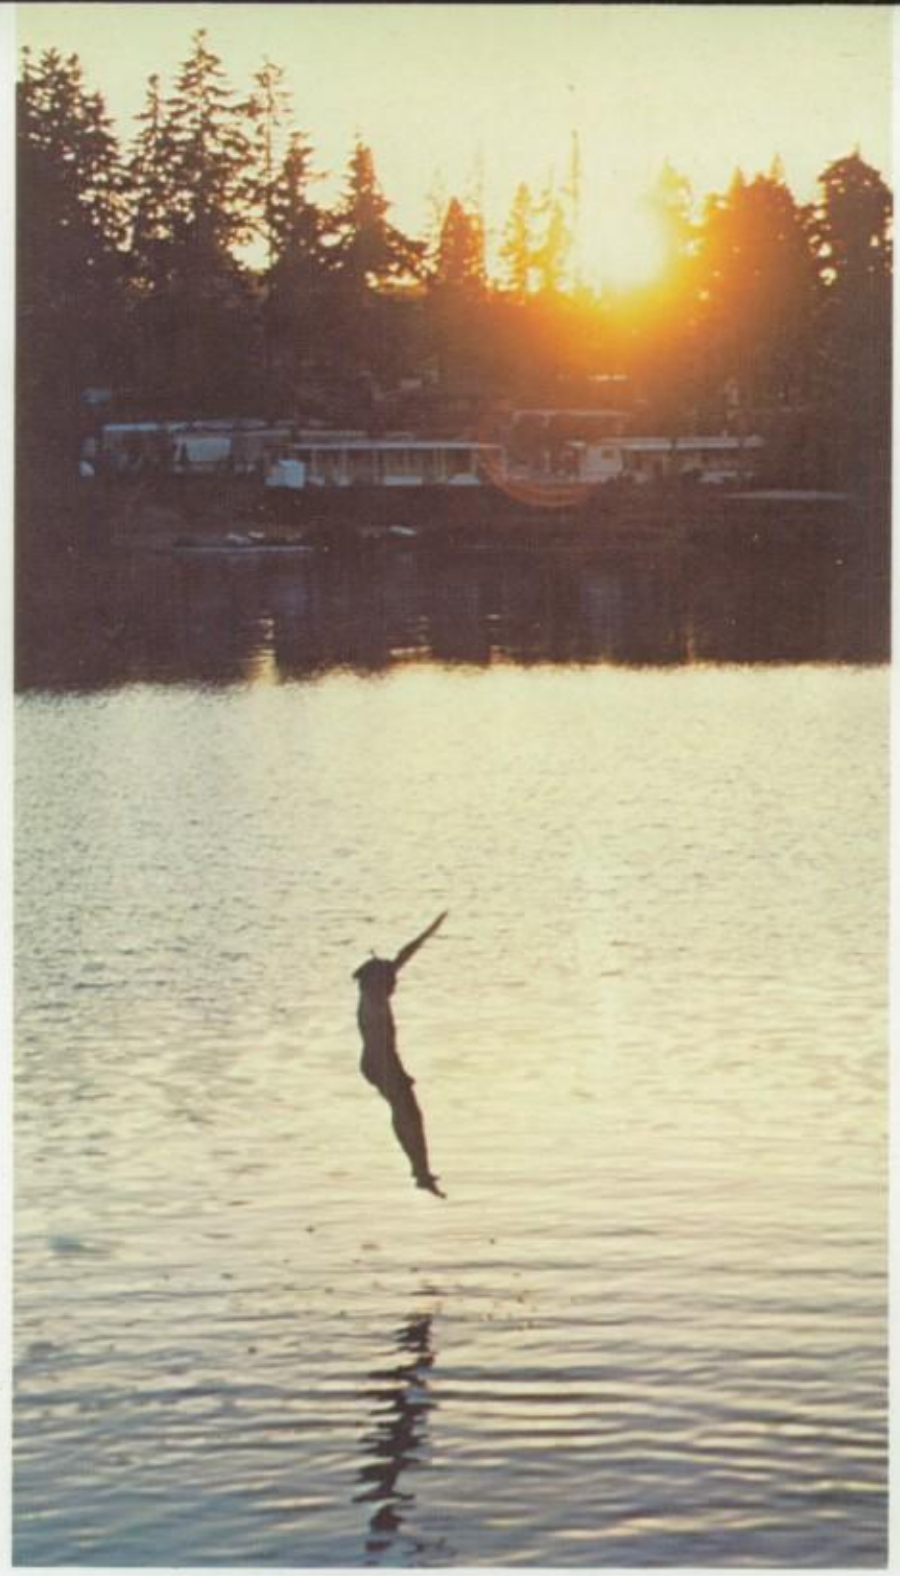


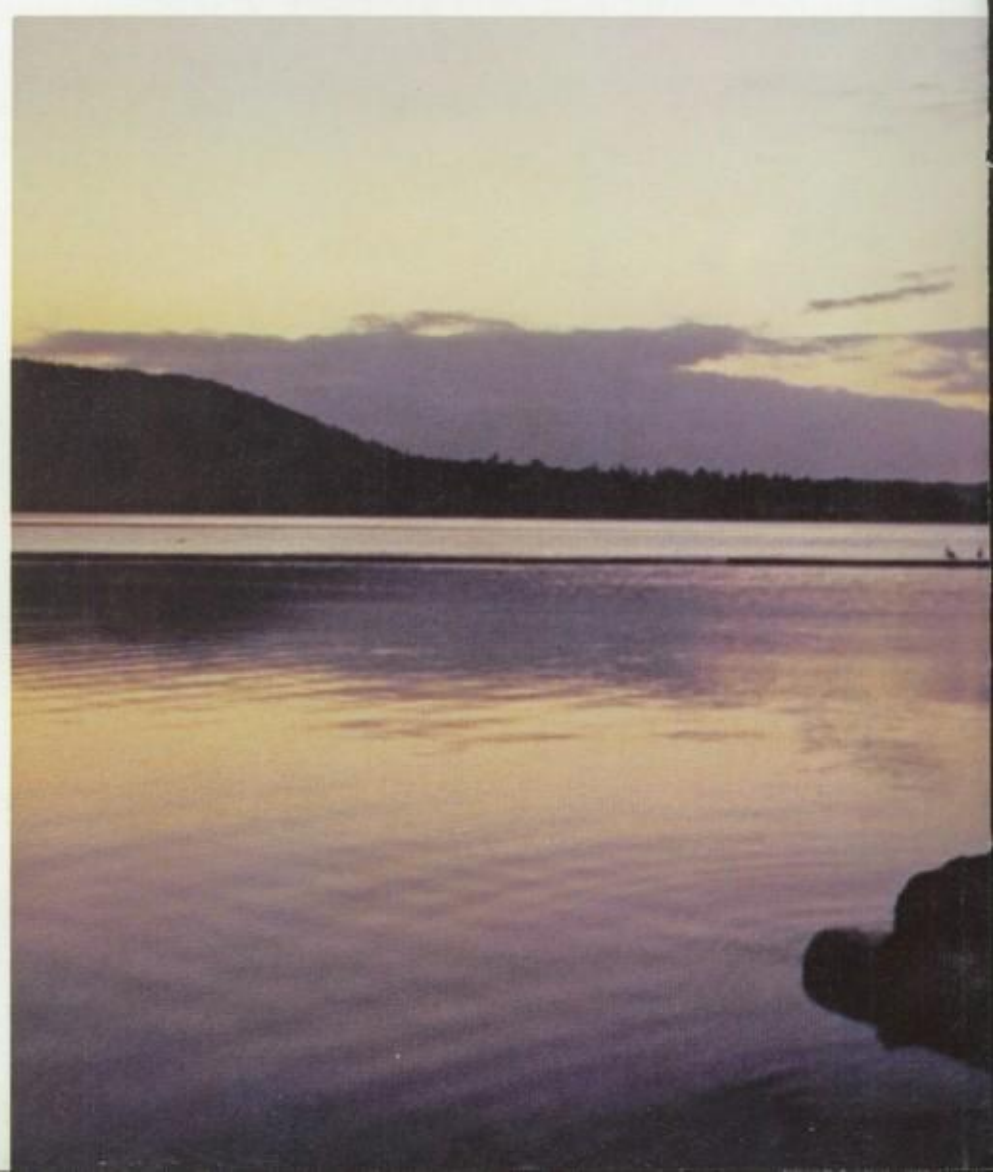
'Hey how many football
games did you
really see?'

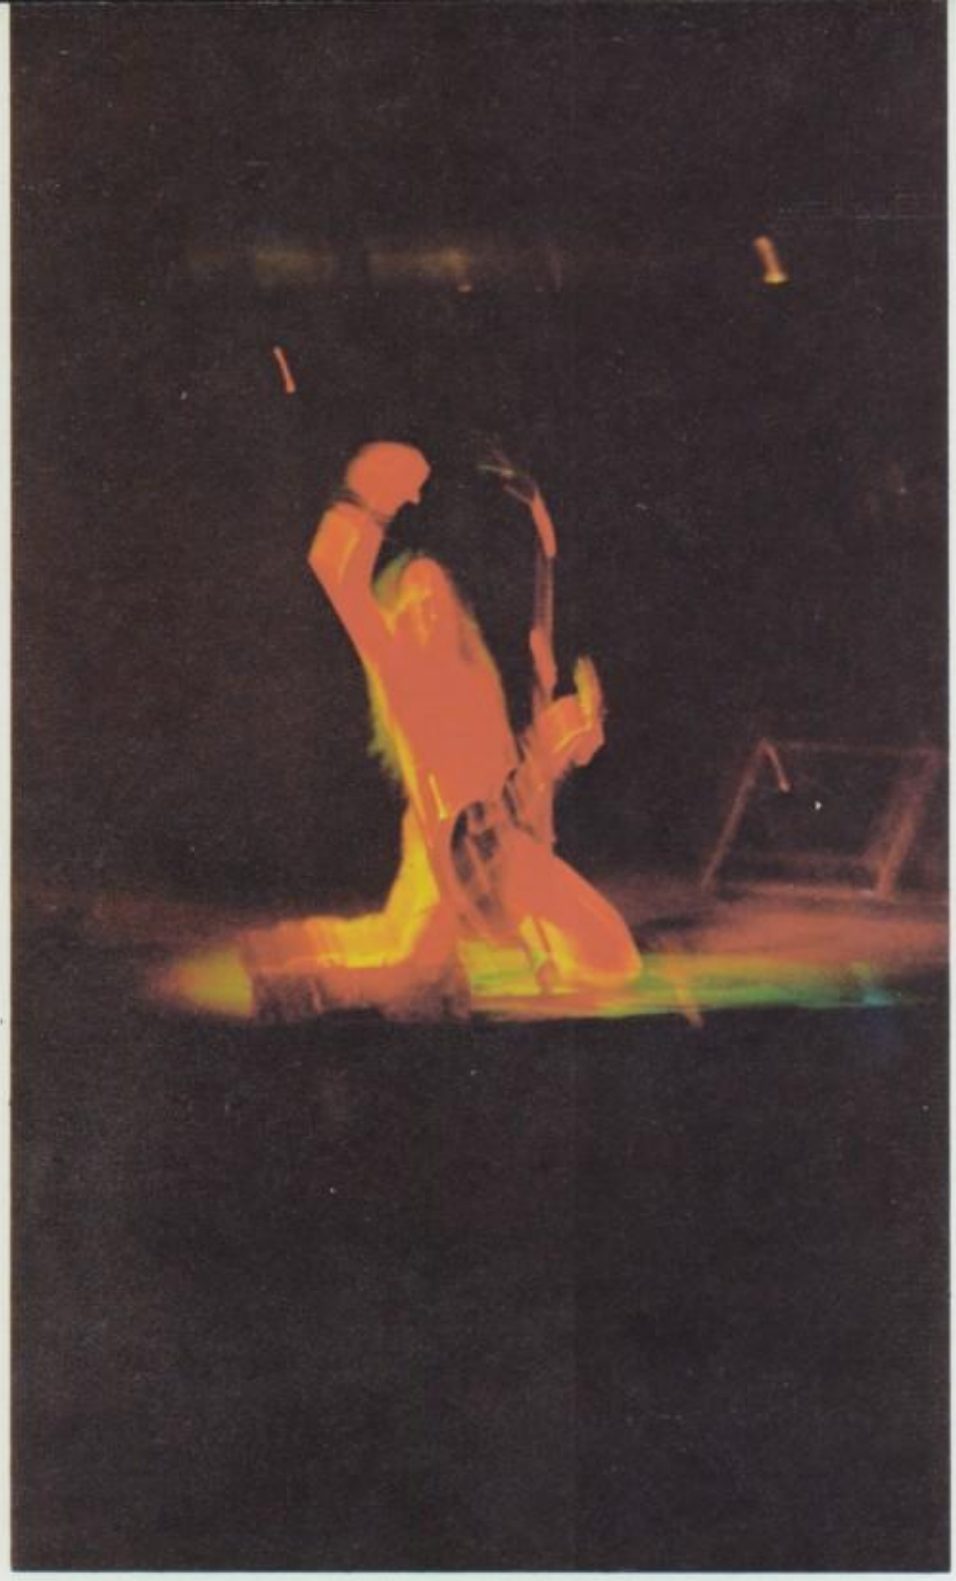
'Not too many whole ones;
I spent too much
time keeping warm
and watching the girls.'

'Just think,
it's almost over.
No more extra time.'

'Ya, we'll be too busy
with homework,
then Homecoming,
and all those football games.'

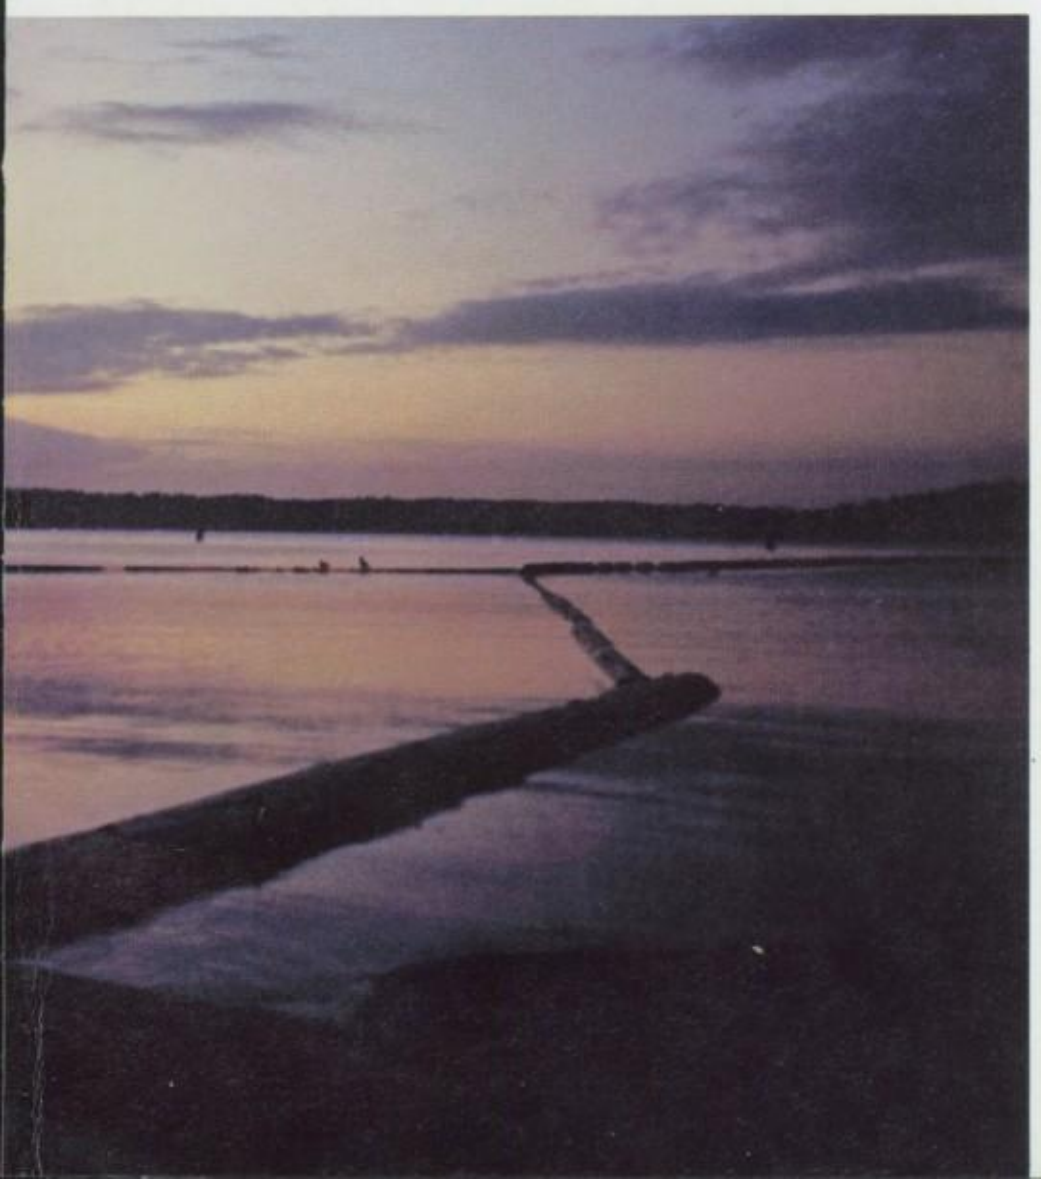






'No more 5 a.m.
nights
after concerts—'

'—or
lazy days
at
the beach. . .'



'Ya, that'll be too bad.
By the way,
have you gotten
your registration packet
yet?'

'Uh-huh, I'm already starting to dread it.'

'I don't dread that as much as I do the crowded
halls between classes.'

They hesitantly rose from their comfortable spot
and continued to walk along
the beach. . .

A great metamorphosis takes place when a student becomes a senior. The senior fights a personal struggle to become an individual, and yet remain his parents' child. What he has accomplished, learned, and experienced with the past few years becomes the backbone of his personality. A senior goes through a special time in his life and will be projected into an adult world in a matter of months. He must make decisions that someone else used to make, and dreams quickly begin to change into realities. Graduation for a senior is in his thoughts even at the first of the year. The sometimes mystifying and strange events that occur are attributed to the wide-spread disease known as "senioritis." But, even as the anticipation of graduation draws near, with the fitting of caps and gowns, tickets to the senior party, and graduation itself, the senior's thoughts seem to change back again, and he wonders what lies ahead.

Class of '78 is great

Spirit and fun filled activities have surrounded the Senior Class. To start the year off they had complete success with Homecoming. As Senior Class Treasurer Tim Prasil summed it up, "Homecoming was #1. The Saturday night dance was a success; we made more money on it than last year."

The officers have "a very positive tone," as described by Senior Class Advisor Mr. John Scannell. Vice President Mike Luchino has worked with the other officers to make this year a success. The secretary, Nancy Leigh, "really liked to get things done, and was always keeping people organized," replied Mr. John Scannell.

Senior Class Historian Pam Grimm thinks, "The class has really gotten closer. Everybody seems to be working well together."

Some of the activities accomplished were the film festival, lots of bake sales, car washes and a t-shirt sale. All these projects were to raise money for Senior Ball.

Now Seniors, all that is left is graduation . . .

1. The Senior Class Officers are busy at work planning exciting activities.

2. Showing who's the best class are Senior Officers: Vice President Mike Luchino, Secretary Nancy Leigh, President Michael Davis, Historian Pam Grimm and Treasurer Tim Prasil.

History is worth a lot more

Did you ever get tired of studying how Columbus discovered America or what happened during the War of 1812? Elective history was more than just history. It involved classes that were meant to broaden the students' awareness of the current world, while also giving them the chance to see how people can behave.

"One of our goals is that by the time the student has completed his studies at Newport, he should have worked in numbers of fields in the Social Sciences, such as psychology, anthropology and sociology and have had some exposure to societies and current events outside our nation." commented Mr. Bruno Pierini, Social Studies Department Chairperson.

Some other goals were to help each student for his own opinions, organize ideas and to defend his conclusions.

The Social Studies Department continually evaluated courses to see which would be dropped and looked at courses for the upcoming year, such as "Futures". "Futures will be a course that looks at how societies will be in the future and what we'll have to do to prepare for them," commented Mr. Pierini.

1. Ms. Genese Harney looks over the shoulder of a student she is helping.

2. An interesting question catches the attention of Ms. Barbara Velategui in her Human Relations class.

3. Mr. Bruno Pierini, "the Lion," gives a student an intriguing grin.

Discover our system

There is an experience that everyone goes through at least once in his life. It teaches one of a vast "world" where monumental decisions are made about the future and where past was formed. This "world" is a mystery to many until the experience of American Government.

It is the purpose of the American Government Class to make us aware of our system. Mr. Peter Vall-Spinosa, American Government teacher, hopes to see that his students, perhaps ten years from now, can say, "I am not unnerved or disgusted now that I recognize how omnipresent the system really is; how prevailing it is."

Mr. Vall-Spinosa thought the main asset of his classes was the students. "The students make the class by questioning their own situations." He summed up the students activities by saying he thought they were more pragmatic than those of six years ago, when he started teaching here.

1. Mr. Peter Vall-Spinosa looks for the answer to one of his students' questions.

2. Mr. Ralph Hayes waits for a response from his class.

3. Mr. Gene Paterson is surprised his students can't read his board.

On your own

Independent English at Newport is a class that was popular among seniors. Students took the responsibility of working and completing assignments on their own with weekly progress discussions from the course instructor. Individual methods of class teaching allowed students to spend less time on guided discussion and more time on written assignments.

Films, videotapes, records and interviews were encouraged throughout the course to keep students in touch with different types of media. This improved their abilities in English and built a stonger awareness of the other research sources available through media.

1. "Working on your own is what Independent English is all about," comments Ms. Tia Kinnear.

2. Mr. Steven Mooney is one of the new English teachers working in the Writing Center.

3. Our Learning Resource Director is Ms. Alice Briant.

Math programs expand

Got the interest? Get involved in the advanced math program. The program consisted of Advanced Algebra/Trigonometry, Math Analysis, and Calculus. A sophomore who started out his year by taking Math Analysis could take Advanced Calculus his senior year.

This year, Advanced Calculus was a college-taught course. Another addition to the area is Ms. Terri McGuire, the new instructional assistant of the math center. "She is well-versed in all areas of math," remarked Mr. Earle Smith.

The students who enrolled in this program were college-bound. It gave them the opportunity to prepare for college, and they will be that much further ahead.

The math department is going to revise the whole program, update the material, and is hoping to get more students involved. Mr. Earle Smith commented, "Everybody in the department enjoys what they are doing and enjoys working with the students."

1. Mr. Jim Murphy smiles as he waits for his students to respond.

2. Mr. Earle Smith can't believe that that student is late again!

3. Mr. Bob Albo waits patiently for one of his math students to finish a problem on the board.

4. Taking down scores, Mr. John Fullerton is amazed at his trigonometry students.

Enjoyment creates success

S.W.R.L.—swirl? Was it a new code, a new language? No, but it was helpful in language, especially foreign language. S.W.R.L. stood for speaking, writing, reading and listening—the four factors necessary in learning a second tongue.

Advanced foreign language students have found the program rewarding. "Those who have stuck with four or five years are successful and have found complete enjoyment and satisfaction in it. Most go on to college and receive at least a minor in the subject. Many travel to Europe, some to live and study there after high school." Mr. Lyle Nichols was pleased with the program.

Forty percent of the student body has taken a foreign language—three times the national average. This is due to the "superb teaching staff and excellent program," stated Mr. Nichols. All the staff was either foreign-born or was fluent from at least two years firsthand experience.

1. Herr Duane Hatch smiles widely as the photographer catches him glancing up from grading a student's oral responses.

2. M. Alan Biggs listens with interest as one of his pupils gives a response to "Qu'est-ce que se passe?" (what's happening?)

3. Sr. Alfredo Grenion, "El Guapo", exhibits the rare art of wearing a hat, and seems to be enjoying himself while teaching an advanced language class.

Art is a working sense

Independence: self-governing, free from the influence, guidance or control of others, self-reliant. These were some of the possibilities in the atmosphere of Art Studio this year. To create independence in a working sense. To be creative in one or more of the classes offered.

The four different areas were: photography, jewelry, pottery and drawing and painting. They were taught by Mr. Greg Coy, Mr. John Grove and Mr. Ron Ho.

When Mr. Coy was asked his feelings about Art Studio he said, "Art Studio is a contract course allowing for a great deal of freedom in doing creative work while also requiring personal motivation and responsibility. It can be a real fun class for those that can handle it."

1. Art Studio Students express their creativity.

Survival of the sexes

Everyone needed to know the basic skills for day-to-day survival, and that is what the Home Ec. classes taught. There were many classes in which the students were able to participate like Apartment Living, Interior Design, Basic Home Ec. I, Advanced Foods, Clothing, Consumer Ed. and Exploring Childhood.

Ms. Kathy Montgomery, a part time Home Ec. teacher commented, "Survival of the sexes would be an appropriate title for the classes which are planned with the young-adult in mind, away from home for the first time and needing to know all those things Mom and Dad never explained. The guys are just as much involved in the program as the girls, with a great deal to offer each class."

1. Ms. Kathy Montgomery, listens with a smile to a cooking demonstration.

2. Ms. Jaclin Woodcook, passes out the next assignment to her Home Ec. students.

Credits earned for working

Did you know that you could earn credits for making money? Cooperative Office Education, Distributive Education and Diversified Occupations are the three classes in which credits are given to students for working in jobs related to these classes.

Cooperative Office Education, commonly known as Co-op, is a class in which the students were holding business and office jobs.

Distributive Education deals with sales and merchandising. The students' jobs were in that field.

Diversified Occupations, as the name suggests, is the class with the widest range of occupations. The students' jobs ranged from Veterinarian Assistant to working in manufacturing plants.

The goals of all three classes were interviewing, acquiring jobs, advancement and up-grading of skills on the job. Most importantly, the students learned to develop good human relations for current and future jobs.

Mr. Allen Dormaier, department head, was pleased with the program. According to him, "Continued success of our work-experience program has been rewarding. Close to 100% of the students have had an opportunity to be employed in the business community."

1. Mr. Bob Lavery teaches accounting in his Distributive Education class.

2. Mr. Allen Dormaier talks to his Co-op Office class about the proper dress for a job interview.

3. Ms. Nadine Engh grades some basic math skills tests from her Diversified Occupations class.

A change of pace

Experience is the best teacher. That was the idea behind the vocational classes offered to the Bellevue students. Many different programs were offered, ranging from Nursing to Horticulture. Students traveled each morning to the school where their class was taught. The schools split up the courses evenly.

Newport's part of the program was Vocational Carpentry, taught by Mr. Richard Robinson. The program gave the students a chance to do the work involved in building a small house, which they sold. They did all the work, including the plumbing and wiring.

The students really enjoyed the class, because they felt they had really accomplished something. Senior Gary Taller stated "I like it because I learned a skill without having to read a book."

What they have learned here at Newport and the other schools, will help them later on in life. The vocational programs are a different form of teaching that helps prepare students for life after high school.

1. Mr. Richard Robinson, takes time out from a hard day's work with his Vocational Carpentry Class.

2. This is only the beginning.

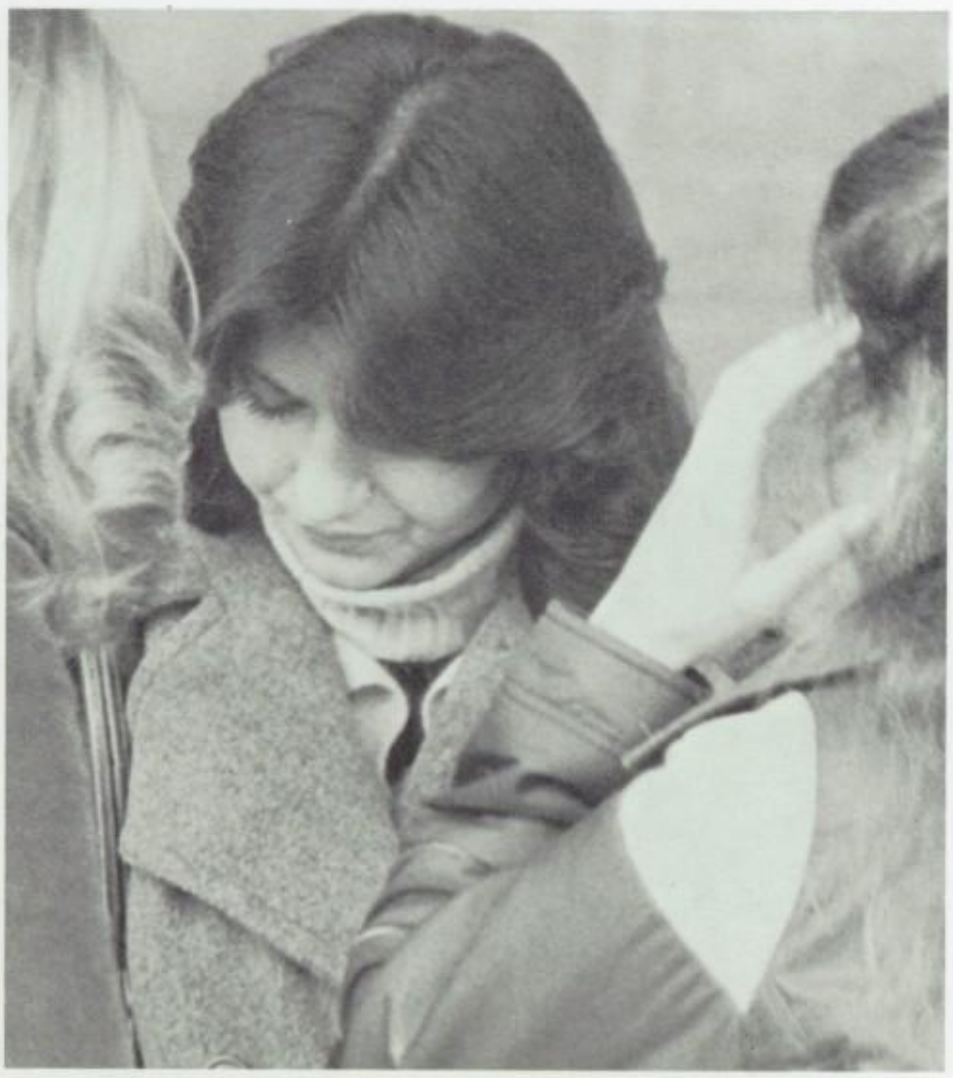
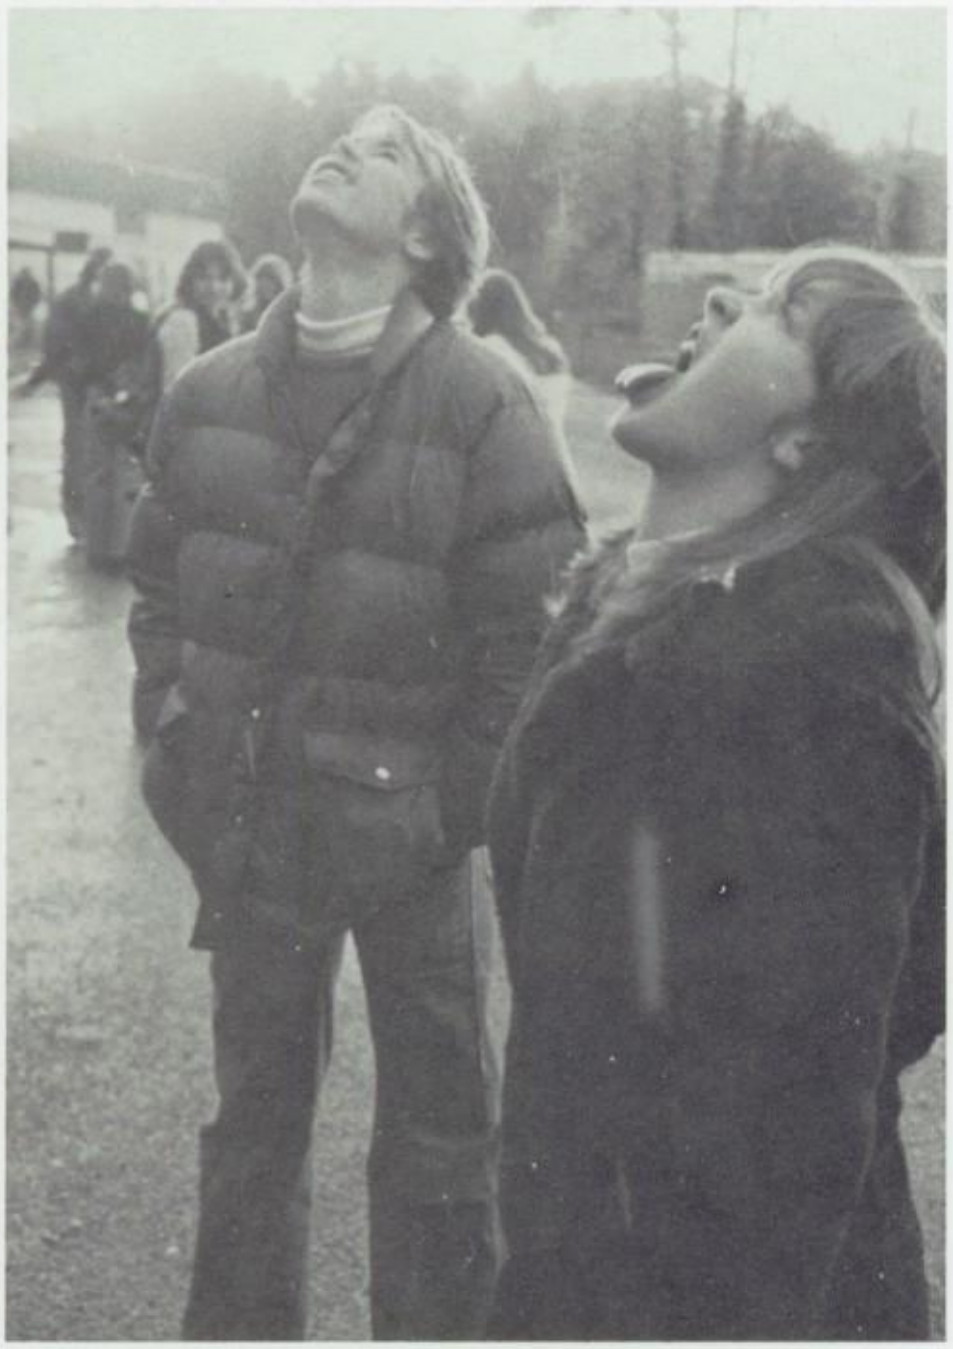
During and after school, students can be seen doing any number of different things. In one day students can be found in just about any area of the campus. While some enjoy socializing on the radiators others enjoy socializing in the smoking area. With the new addition of Factoria Square many enjoyed browsing through the many different shops and establishments. Apart from offering a place for spending free time, the mall gave students a chance for employment close to school. When the night rolls around you can find students participating in one of the exciting sports found at Newport. Many just like to watch the games. After a game or event you can find students at many popular restaurants in the area; the most frequently visited being MacDonald's, Shakeys, Dairy Queen and Denny's.

As he rounded the corner
he saw that familiar face.
His hair was shorter,
but he was still the same.

'How goes it—so far?'

'Pretty good. My locker
is out in no man's land,
but pretty good.'





'I'm going to the
pep assembly today.'

'So am I.
There are supposed to be
some pretty wild games this time.
I'm on my way
to get something to eat
in the cafeteria.'

'Save me a seat.'

As he pulled the big blue swinging doors open
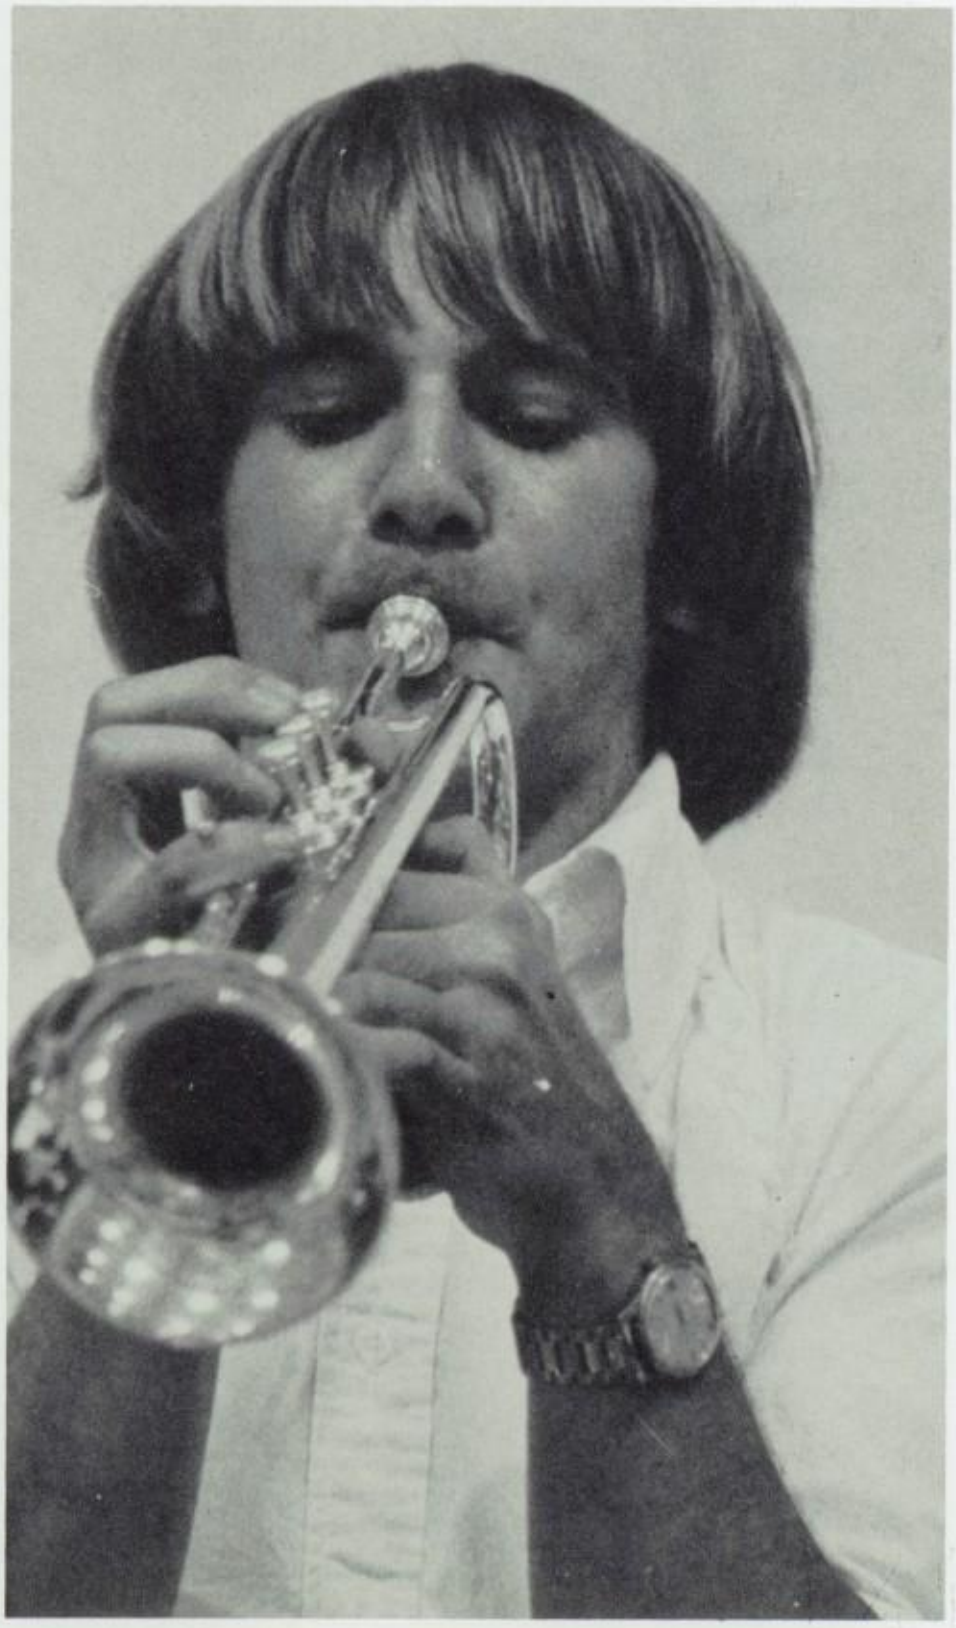
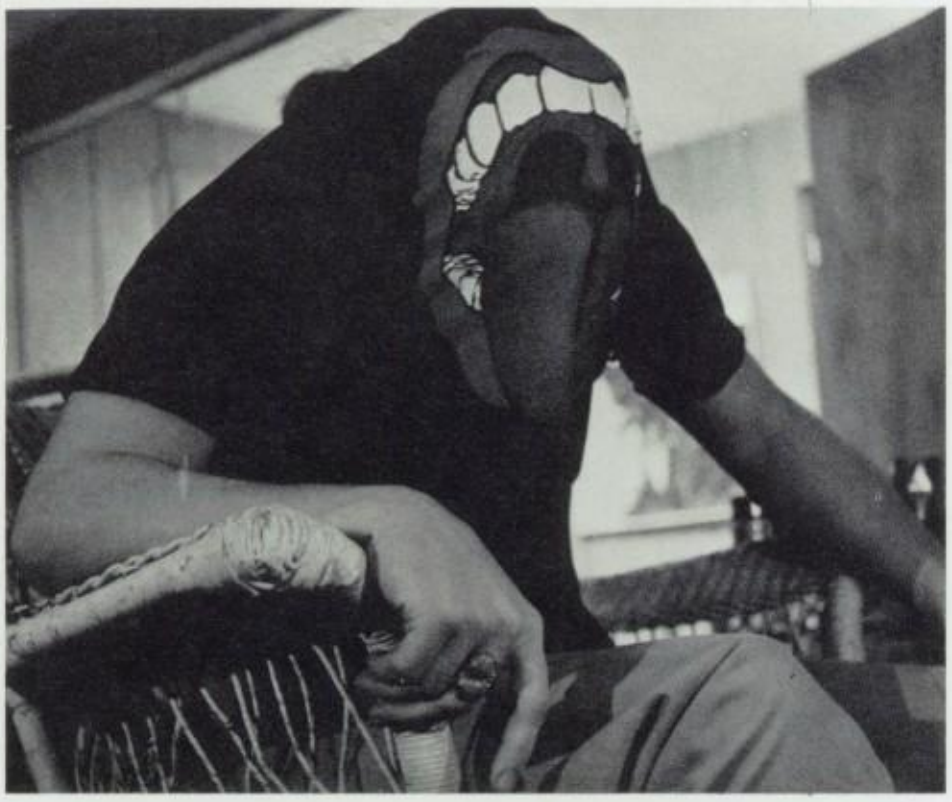
he could see that
it looked dead.
While he was making his way
to the machines
he surveyed the whole room.
There were a few
groups of people
scattered about,
but no one he knew.
He got a milk and sat down.





'Hi, what's for lunch today?'

'Burritos; where'd you go?'

'I had to get rid of my books.
Hey, let's go to the Center
on Friday night.'

'O.K. I'll drive;
talk to some of the others.
I'm sure they'll want to go.'

' 'Sleeper' is playing-let's go.'

They pulled up some chairs and sat back to enjoy
the movie.

Hold fast to dreams

Fun, excitement, rowdiness, hard work, memories . . .

The chairpersons, Seniors Andrea Butaud and Joanne MacAulay, had homecoming week run smoothly. Spirit Week started off with Monday as T-Shirt Day. Tuesday showed how many students were really "hick" at heart, with Hic Day. Wednesday everybody came in their favorite hat and the Sophomores played the Juniors in powderpuff. The Juniors came out victorious with a score of 12 to 2. Thursday was Sports Day and competition for the title of powderpuff was held. The Juniors came out ahead again by a lucky touchdown in the last minute of play; the score being 6 to 0. Friday was Red and Gold Day and the assembly organized by the Seniors was, "The most spirited and most involved assembly I've seen in years," according to Mr. John Scannell, senior class advisor.

That night at the game the climax of the week was reached at halftime. To start off, the Seniors received an "excellent" rating in hall decoration. The sophomores had "A super fantastic float," according to Ms. Jaclin Woodcook, sophomore class advisor, which took first place. The Seniors ended up being overall winners with Juniors second and Sophomores third. The royalty chosen by Newport was also announced at halftime. The score of the game ended up being Newport 19; Issaquah 42.

Pep staff for spirit

S-P-I-R-I-T. Got spirit? Uh-huh. Let's hear it! Okay. The 1977-78 cheerleaders started off the year with great enthusiasm. September 10th was the date of their first pep assembly. There they introduced the football team and had class competition in yelling.

This was the first time in three years the cheerleaders had only had one squad. They felt that this made it hard on them because they sometimes had two activities going at the same time.

During a week, cheerleaders put in 15 to 20 hours of hard work. Most of this time they spent baking cookies, making locker decorations, planning pep assemblies, making posters and writing good-luck notes. Along with all the work they did, they also had to maintain a 2.5 G.P.A.

Over the summer, the cheerleaders spent a week at cheerleading camp. They received

▲ 6 ▼ 7

▲ 8 ▼ 9

all superior marks in the cheer competitions.

Ms. Harney was their advisor and they appreciated all the good things she did for them. As they put it, "She's a really neat advisor and puts out a lot of her own time and money into cheerleading."

As Senior Lisa Kutch put it, "It was a lot of fun and a lot of work."

1. Junior Maria Correa claps and watches for the team to make another move.

2. During Homecoming, the cheerleaders display their enthusiasm.

3. Keeping in time with a chant is Junior Kyomi Satoh.

4. Helping keep the crowd cheering and yelling is Senior Lisa Kutch.

5. Junior Tyra Cerny is ready for the game to start.

6. Showing spirit, fun and excitement, Senior Marilyn Otter starts waving her pom-poms.

7. Senior Heidi Burdick gives a big smile for the cheering crowds.

8. Junior Lisa Shultz performs in a dance routine during a pep assembly.

9. With pom-poms waving, Senior Cindy Carter leads a cheer for the team.

Crusaders march

Hard work, determination, special friends and good times were all accomplished by the 1978 Newport Knight Crusaders.

Besides bikini car washes, pot lucks, and secret pals, the 30 juniors and seniors with two Co-Captains Nicki Sutich and Liz Bissel marched during half time at all home varsity football games and most home varsity basketball games. The routines were made up by the girls themselves and consisted of half drill and half dance routines. On April 29 the Crusaders participated in a state-wide competition in Spokane.

According to Ms. Barbara Velategui, "Besides marching, they added spirit, supported athletic deeds and developed strong friendships and sensitivities towards each other."

Camelot plans all

Excitement, fun and hard work were the reasons people joined Camelot Club. The club put great effort toward involving new students, sophomores and boys. More than any other group, Camelot Club made things happen. The best social event was Tolo; over five hundred people attended. The Big/Little Newporter Picnic represented a lot of work by upperclassmen. Besides these activities, the club sponsored the Fashion Shows, Senior Tea, Daddy-Daughter Dessert and ushered at graduation. Added to the clubs responsibilities were the spirit chain and decorating the football field before home games.

The usual two chairpersons for Tolo and refreshments was changed to three people. Community services were added to the list of the clubs committees.

During meetings a small amount of discussion went on and the people at the meetings were able to express their opinion. They always came to a conclusion.

President Gale Dorn commented, "Everybody tries hard and is always doing her best and getting the job done. A lot of dedication is seen."

Advisor Ms. Sharon Cruikshank, felt that the officers worked hard, long nights and days to make the club function and often went without praise and thanks. Ms. Cruikshank commented, "This year's officers are one of the finest type of young women." Cabinet members and officers started work as soon as they were chosen to prepare the club for the coming year. They had meetings and pot-lucks during the summer.

DECA has varied activities

A group of students was involved in such diversified activities as selling yogurt, taking over a grocery store and making T-shirts.

DECA is a club that all students in General Marketing and Distributive Education classes were involved in.

Advisor Robert Lavery, President Tracy Burris, Vice-president Terri Grieser, Treasurer Steve Borchard and Secretary Cathy Sims organized projects for the group.

Mr. Lavery summed up the course by saying, "This year's class is one of the neatest groups you could ever work with. They're self-starters, responsible, and most important, a lot of fun to be with."

1. Senior Matt Bustad listens attentively during class.

Spaides are helpful

Special Aides is a service organization instilled in most high schools by Kiwanis Clubs throughout the state.

The Spaides, assisted by Mr. Earl Smith, went to Bellevue Terrace Nursing Home every Thursday to visit the elderly. They played bingo, planned parties and shopping excursions, as well as picnics.

The two Co-presidents, Jan Swisher and Rick Herzberg, along with Secretary Becky Wheless, brought together people who helped teach swimming to handicapped children, and they also organized art classes and took the kids to the zoo.

In December the club manned the CARE booth at Frederick and Nelson's, collecting donations, and at the end of the year Spaides attended a state convention, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club.

2. Sophomore Randy Brown and Junior Lisa Ahmonrode work together on a project at a Spaides Meeting.

6. Senior Russ Dickenson and Janet Swisher make paper flowers for the elderly.

Stu-Co improves

There was a common misconception that Stu-Co was a secret, elite club that met every Wednesday to plot against the students and to dole out large sums of students' money at will. Stu-Co proved this theory false by acting openly and thoughtfully in making every decision for the students' benefit.

Student Council was the means by which our entire student body was represented by elected students. Every student was affected by its legislation. From the chartering of every club to the passing of bills and alloting money, Stu-Co's influence touched every corner of high school activity.

Representatives came from Sophomore English, social studies classes and charted clubs and activities. President Todd Henry said, "Stu-Co was a younger organization this year than in the past, due to the fact that Jr/Sr English was no longer offered." Since Stu-Co's majority was new and unfamiliar with Robert's Rules of Order, Mr. Henry said they stressed organization. The first step was to appoint Doug Smith as Parliamentarian to help the representatives better understand Student Council procedures.

ASB officers featured a "Special of the Week" at their meetings. This helped spread some idea generating and discussion promotion tactics that they learned at summer leadership camp.

Stu-Co made some significant accomplishments, including our first annual jog-a-thon, which also involved Tyee Jr. High. The jog-a-thon helped raise the money needed to purchase a padded beam for gymnastics and a mini-bus to be used for school activities.

Stu-Co also dealt with student/faculty problems, such as library noise and cafeteria disruption.

They planned major productions at Arts Week, for the benefit of the NASB.

1. Sophomore Alan Keyes presents a bill proposal.

2. Senior Todd Henry, Stu-Co President, and Senior Doug Smith, Stu-Co Parliamentarian, discuss Robert's Rules of Order.

3. Going over financial records are Senior Jeff Allison, Stu-Co Vice-President and Senior Susan Hamilton, Stu-Co Treasurer.

4. All the Stu-Co officers prepare for a meeting.

5. Cheryl Reible, a junior, objects to the bill being presented, as Junior Kathy Edwards listens on.

6. Stu-Co President Todd Henry listens carefully to the questions asked.

7. Senior Sandy Redshaw, Senior Joanne MacAulay and Senior Mike Luchino take notes during a meeting.

KL staff takes on a new look

Most things change with time; new people, new ideas, a new way of looking at things.

With a change of editors came a new view of how the Knightlife should be run. Layout and format were changed, editor sections were revised, even the front page had a new look to it. Larger pictures appeared, stories were based on the future, and it bore the countenance of a magazine.

The paper was really column oriented. Three new and unique columns evolved. The news and sports features were more in-depth than in years past. "Student response was good; we feel this was due to the fact that the stories were much more interesting because much more happened that people were involved in," stated Co-Editor Todd Henry.

8

The staff's major goal was to receive an All-American rating for their efforts; a title which they missed by a mere five points in '77. "A lot of talent and good people were on the staff and many will be coming back. The paper should be good for a long time." commented Co-Editor Sandy Swan.

1. In addition to writing her own column, Junior Janie Smith signs up to cover an additonal story.

2. Junior Jeff Probst decides which subjects have the biggest possibilities of going over well with the student body.

3. Caught in one of the few moments in which they get along, Editors Todd Henry and Sandy Swan give each other an optimistic hug.

4. Junior Libby Dubar takes a moment to decide which feature she would like to write for the next edition of the paper.

5. Kellanne Henry, sophomore, manages "mind over fingers" to get an editorial typed on time.

6. Sophomore Jackie Estes finishes a news story and adds her final touch.

7. The Knightlife staff reacts to an editor's proposal.

8. Junior Phil Simpkins was head photographer for the Knightlife for both semesters.

Creative minds seek originality

The annual: a book depicting a year of history in a form showing creativity and originality. The job of the annual staff was tedious and demanding. Order and cooperation were key factors in the production of the "Accolade". Many hours were put into the production of the book, and though all class time was used to complete numerous assignments, many extra hours were spent to meet all pressing deadlines.

The members of the yearbook staff worked hard to get the best pictures to represent the students, from the adversities and pleasures of their social lives to the hardships and triumphs of daily classes and sports.

1. Junior Kristi Besch works hard at cutting a picture to size.

2. Senior Gale Dorn looks up for a moment from her typing, with a look of satsifaction.

3. Sabrina Bobrow, senior, searches for the right senior name.

4. Junior Jenny Nelson concentrates on hitting the right keys.

5. Senior Debbie Crone quickly checks over her layout.

6. Editor Brian Sims, Seniors Laura Hebeler, Nicki Sutich, and Editor Cyndy Olsen discuss the problems involved in tying a year together in one book.

7. Laura Hebeler, senior, contributes time to painting a sales sign.

8. Copy Editor Casey Haskins listens intently to a student's ideas.

9. Junior Leslie Hales and Senior Barry Owens work diligently on a pressing deadline.

10. Advisor Jack Wilson comes to the aid of Seniors Fran Baumgartner and Karen Waterbury.

11. Steve Borchers, layout editor, ponders a troublesome point.

Band adds spirit

The adding of atmosphere to the football and basketball games was accomplished by the band this past year. Led by Director Robert Bailey, the band also played at numerous concerts throughout the year.

The band had an active year which, included auditions for All-City and All-Northwest bands. There was also one French horn player chosen to perform with the Seattle Symphony Orchestra.

The climax of the year was the trip to Victoria in which the band marched in the Victorian Days Parade. The expenses for this trip were earned by each of the band members. Selling coupons, swags and baked goods were a few of their projects.

When asked to comment on the band and activities, Mr. Bailey said, as he often did during rehearsals, "Just one more time."

1. Sophomore Sandy McComb pauses for a breather.

2. Rod Hendry, sophomore, concentrates on his music.

3. Trumpet players Craig Chaney, sophomore, Darrell Scattergood, junior, and Charlie Crane, sophomore, add a unique sound to the band.

4. All the long hours of practice result in a well performed song by Junior Jenny Nelson.

5. Mr. Robert Bailey, band director, leads the band at one of its formal concerts.

6. Practicing for the upcoming concert is Junior Amy Cheng.

Variety is the key to performing

A well-formed group of experienced musicians, the Stage Band offered a place for players to perform types of music ranging from "jazz" and "blues" to "popular rock." The musical selections chosen quite frequently featured solo artist and instrument sections. The group, which was organized the opening year of Newport, has come from a time when popular music was not available to non-professionals to where it stands today, able to get any music and play it on a high performance scale.

A performing group since 1972, the Orchestra has become a well-seasoned musical ensemble. The director, Mr. John Cox, who has conducted the group for six years, enjoyed watching the musicians advance through the always challenging musical arrangements. The group, which consisted not only of Newport students, but also several Tyee Junior High members, was able to perform in the All-School musical, and in numerous concerts and contests throughout the season. Contests were available both for the soloists and for the entire Orchestra, and two members received the honor of being selected for the All-State Orchestra, which performed during the Music Educators' Conference.

1. Senior Steve Rands rips out a bass line during practice.

2. Seniors Tanya Johnson and Glen Hiraki set up for a quick run-through of their music.

3. Mr. John Cox, leads a somewhat enthusiastic group of musicians.

4. Senior Jeff Thompson and Sophomore Miles Ashley, concentrate on performing their part with a professional flare.

5. Junior Brett Mullins keeps a steady beat for the Stage Band to follow.

6. Sophomore Kim Brown and Shelly Mc Elroy of Tyee Junior High, play through the music with a determined attitude.

7. Steve Borchers, junior, shows the variation of instruments used in Stage Band as he plays his Tuba.

8. The Stage Band frequently features solo instrument sections.

Vocalists perform

"Students made a superior sound, better than I've heard before," remarked Mr. George Harshbarger, choir director.

The largest choir was the Concert Choir group consisting of 54 students. This group worked basically on all types of music, especially sacred and spiritual songs and folk song settings. The next group, the Chorus, contained all girls and practiced and performed all types of music. Knight Sounds, a smaller group of 16, sang pop and vocal jazz. Set aside from other music departments, the Newport Singers were unique in the Madrigal style they used.

7

"We attempted ambitious music and I'm impressed with the potential students brought to class," commented Mr. Harshbarger. One highlight of the year was working towards a trip to San Francisco. Mr. Harshbarger commented, "It's rewarding to see students apply what they've learned in class to their whole approach to music."

1. Knight Sound members work hard on perfecting songs.

2. Theresa Watson, junior, and seniors Beth Bessette and Ann Hurd practice tone quality.

3. Members of Knight Sounds practice for the upcoming concert.

4. Concert performance is part of the Chorus class.

5. The Newport Singers display their talent at an annual concert.

6. Seniors Kathy Mc Kown and Perry Brassington work together on keeping in time with the rest of the group.

7. Seniors Stacy Taylor, Perry Brassington and Randi Zink study music before rehearsal.

Debaters cook

"Winning comes from being excellent and not the other way around," commented Gary Walker, former debate coach. Mr. Walker resigned from his teaching and coaching job of the Debate and Competitive Speech classes at the end of the first semester. Cyndi Ohlsen, senior, summed up what the whole team felt. "The team is really sorry that Mr. Walker is leaving, but we're glad that we had him for several years. We're depressed about his leaving, but we're optimistic about the new coach, Pat Thomason".

With the smallest squad the school has had in years, the debate team got off to a slow start at the beginning of the season. However the team quickly regained its reputation as one of Washington's finest debate teams by taking second overall in Washington's biggest tournament at Gonzaga University. They also placed first in the state, the first time they have ever done so. For the first time, Mr. Walker felt the team had reached its potential and was as strong as the competitive speech team.

1. Junior Lynn Sage, junior division debater and senior division orater and interper, timed another team member's constructive speech.

2. Senior Ben Reali, junior division debater, is psyching himself up for his upcoming powwow.

3. Junior Jared Bobrow, senior division debater, reads his affirmative case, known as the Hospice.

4. Junior Keith Emry, senior division debater, helps Junior Debbie Fry with her affirmative speech.

5. Senior Russ Dickenson, junior division debater and extemporaneous speaker, listens attentively at his opponet's refutations.

6. Senior Cyndi Ohlsen and Junior Jon Iverson work on the makings of a new case.

7. Juniors Scott Nodell and Janie Smith, junior division debaters, follow their opponents speech.

Musical proves excellent

The cast of the musical "My Fair Lady" consisted of people with many artistic abilities. By Director John Scannell's estimation, Greg Parish blesses the school with his super-positive attitude and leadership abilities. Scott Wertman was the pride and joy of the play for Mr. Scannell.

"The major behind-the-scenes problem was the coordination. Of course it always has been and always will be a problem because of the large quantity of people to handle and work with," commented Mr.

Scannell. He thought this play was better than ever before because everything meshed the way it was intended.

Not only did the members of the cast do an outstanding job; so did the backstage organizers, like Stephanie Dye, Assistant Stage Director. Her devotion of time was incredible and given completely on her own. Stephanie took care of Mr. Scannell by helping to make his job easier.

"We cast right and everybody fit superwell into their parts. It is the individual sacrifices of time that make a great show."

1. Eliza is the talk of the streets; and a bit of laughter is shown.

2. Harry (Pete Kelleran) and Jamie (Todd Henry) get excited over Doolittle's (Scott Wertman) "little bit of luck".

3. Before Eliza's entry at the Ascot, Henry Higgins (Greg Parish) explains to his mother (Mary Beam) about Eliza.

4. The cast does a finale for the audience.

5. Amy Harper, as Eliza, has a heated argument with Henry Higgins.

6. All eyes are on the servant chorus for this scene.

7. Eliza (Jennifer Vadino) in her finest moment—preparing for the Embassy Ball.

8. Jeff Allison does an excellent job, playing the part of Colonel Pickering.

9. Freddy Eynsford-Hill (Kirk Parce) sings a love song for Eliza.

You Can't Take it With You

Mr. Bill Eyman finally got his chance to do the play he always wanted to do. He chose to do it this year because, "It is the strongest cast I've ever had to work with."

The cast of "You Can't Take It With You" consisted of 20 people, half of whom are 50 years and older. The students had a tough time trying to act and look old, and they spent a lot of time practicing their walk and trying to talk in the correct way. None of their effort was wasted however, because the show was a great success.

The behind-the scene crew, led by Senior

Stephanie Dye, had a lot of special effects to set up. This included explosions, fireworks and other technical works.

The play was basically about a wierd family who did unusual things. There was one "normal" girl in the family who fell in love with this guy. She was afraid to bring him home and when she did a catastrophe happened. It was an hilarious comedy and the cast had a good time with the play.

1. Boris Kolenkov (Steve Rands) reminisces about the old country.

2. Ed Carmichael (Tim Prasil) discusses his printing techniques with his friend, Mr. DePinna (Todd Stampfler.)

Sports is a very important happening and is open
to anyone who would
like to participate.
One of the very special satisfactions you can get from playing is that you are no longer 20 or 30
individuals playing the
same sport, but a team.
There is an excitement
felt when the individuals
of a team pull together
and act as a whole.
On the other hand, apart
from the tough competition on Friday nights, there are many long hours of practice,
sweat, and frustration.
To each team member,
not only the goals of that
team are important,
but also their individual goals. Along with the expectation of winning grows a sense of respect among themselves and between the coach and the team. Being part of a team involves a
great deal of sacrifice
from all members, but
they gain something more;
the reward of
self-accomplishment.

As the movie drew to a close, a throng of people began to rush towards the gym.

'Let's get going so we can beat the crowd.'

When they entered the doors, a wave of excitement rushed over them.

'People are really up
for the game tonight.
Let's go to the top of the stands.'

From the top they had a bird's eye view
of the event that
was about to take place. The excitement
drew to a climax
as the cheerleader
picked up the microphone.

While they slowly made progress to the head
of the line, they could hear the roar
of the crowd
start to build.

'Let's get a program,
I want to see
if I know anyone
on the other team.'

They made their way up through the stands.

As they sat down,
they not only
became part of the crowd, but also
part of the team.

Gridders gave it their all

Keep on pushing, keep on hitting. That was the attitude of the Knights' Football Team. According to Coach Bill Bloomer, the Gridders improved every week and were always playing their best. This showed when they took victories in the last games of the year against Juanita and Aberdeen. The team ended up with a record of 4 wins and 6 losses.

"We may not have had a winning season, but the team had something else; winning attributes," said Coach Bloomer after it was over.

Two records were broken this year by Senior Eric Brooks. He ran 88 yards from the line of scrimmage and also had the most yards rushing, with 231.

Coach Bloomer said the team also had excellent running backs this year with Seniors Tim Betz, Eric Brooks, and Steve Rands. He also commented that the defensive line did exceptionally well with Keith McLean, Mike Piha, and Brad Zirckel, all seniors.

All in all Coach Bloomer thought this was the best team he had ever had as far as spirit goes. "They really liked to play football," he said.

1. Ken Burnett easily takes down the opponent with the help of his teammates.

2. Gary Taller and Mike Piha, seniors, take a break while the offense has a turn.

3. The opponents close in but that doesn't stop Quarterback Mike Mains.

4. Everyone gets in the action for a successful defensive play.

5. Great blocking by Eric Beckes gives Mike Mains a chance to complete another successful play.

6. No help is needed from Brad Zirckel on another defensive play. His teammates have it well in hand.

7. Opponents are left standing as Gary Taller goes head first after one more great interception.

Golfers finish fourth

The youngest golf team ever in Newport's history had its best overall season in the last four years. With a final score of twelve wins and four losses, the Golf Team came in fourth place in the league competition, defeating its long lost rivals, Bellevue and Sammamish.

As a first try for Newport a Girls' Golf Team was competing. Its final season record was two wins and two losses. The two teams totalled 35 participants, who remained throughout the full season. Coach

Cross Country started strong when a large group of students turned out to participate in the sport.

In the King Co league meet, held at Lake Sammamish State Park, both boys' and girls' teams placed third.

Seniors Phil McKee and Mark Ryan led the boys' team, running well at the West Central District meet held at Evergreen High School in Burien. The team placed seventh.

All ya' need is a little P.M.A.

All you need is a little teamwork and determination to come up with a winning team, and this year's hoopsters rate No. 1 in both categories. With this kind of a combination, the Knights went out and proved that they were one of Newport's finest teams, both on and off the court.

They started their season off by coming out the high scorer at the opening Jamboree held at Sammamish. This was only the beginning of some spectacular play to be seen by the Knights' faithful fans.

In the beginning they had a few falls in some close fourth quarter games, but this wasn't to last long. Soon they were winning and starting a streak that included a very exciting game against Bothell that lasted through four overtimes.

As the season went on the team got stronger. They kept on pushing and pulling and never let anything bring them down. It was a very emotional year for the team, but they handled everything well.

This year's team was made up of a bunch of exceptional players. Coach Fran Drake put it best by saying, "This year's team will always be remembered for its determination and spirit."

1. Junior Jeff Softli leaps out of reach to shoot for two.

2. Center Pat McCarthy tips it to the Knights.

3. Senior Brian King does some fancy footwork to get past his opponent.

4. Newport's Larry Applegate watches the ball drop in for another two points.

Teamwork triumphs

The balls were really making the baskets this year with the help of the Junior Varsity Basketball team.

"This season's games were a tremendous success," remarked J.V. coach Jim Murphy.

Mr. Murphy felt that any program should help the team to learn more about themselves, to build character and self-confidence and to develop lasting friendships.

Coach Murphy enjoys working with people who hustle as the team did. "The players on the team are hardworking, dedicated, and very enjoyable to coach."

Some of the main goals that were mentioned by Mr. Murphy were learning fundemental skills, building individual self-confidence, and teaching teamwork.

1. Kevin McQuilkin goes in for the bucket.

2. Junior Bruce King, gets the points despite his opponents attempt to block the shot.

3. Greg Avant sinks another two for the Knights.

4. Junior Mike Mains in a stop in the action.

5. Mike Mains and teammate Les Bentley run down court to follow the shot by their teammate.

6. Coach Jim Murphy stops for thought during a time-out.

We Are One

We are one. This was the motto of the 1977-78 Girls' Basketball Team. Head Coach Genese Harney explained that the motto was meant to mean, "either we are number one, or we are together, because we're both."

The team did exceptionally well this year with six returning letter winners. Jody McCarthy returned and became the team's leading scorer, and also the team captain.

It was Ms. Harney's first year as head coach for the Girls' Basketball Team. When asked how she felt, she commented, "I liked it. It's easy when you have a lot of talent, it's a nice way to start." She went on to explain the secret of the Knights' successful season. "We had very intelligent players, we were just very good."

Coach Harney said that special credit should be given to the seniors on the team,

Gymnasts reach heights

One might have heard our coach say "You kids need speed, strength, endurance, self-discipline, timing and courage to survive in this sport." No, this was not football, gymnastics was much more than that. Gymnastics combined strength and grace, creativity and balance into a very difficult sport, often considered an art.

Every year girls' high school gymnastics has become more competitive and dangerous. With the help of ASB funds the team was able to buy a fiberglass bar and a padded balance beam, both of which will become mandatory for safety. With the new equipment, the girls were able to practice much more difficult stunts with confidence.

Gymnastics included four areas: floor exercise, balance beam, uneven bars and vault. The first part of the season the team did compulsary routines and the last half was spent on optional routines the girls made up. Coach Judy Olson said "We did well

Coaches Kathy Court and Judy Olson were very determined and their devotion and time was apparent in the routines. The girls also received concentrated attention on dance from Mary Ann Lamb and Rob Westover helped to spot advanced tumbling. "Their help was appreciated so much," said Mrs. Olson.

Olson, who is in the P.E. department, stated "Gymnastics is one of the most difficult sports and if a girl has competed at the high school level, she should feel a good sense of accomplishment."

1. The girls delight in a win against Inglemoor.

Knighties are still on top

Even with the loss of quite a few good swimmers, the girls' swim team still came in second at the KingCo and third at the State Championships. Eight swimmers and one diver placed in the top twelve at State. An outstanding job was done by Junior Janie Smith, placing second in the 200-yard individual medley and first in the 100-yard free style. She was also on the 200-yard medley relay team that placed second.

Hard work reflects success

Starting the year with a "twice-a-day" practice schedule, the Knights got a jump ahead of the other teams in the league. The team finished its season with an admirable record.

Many seasoned veterans were welcomed back; however, most of the players were young, but experienced. Outstanding players returning to the team included seniors Scott Agnew, Tim Betz, Eric Brooks, and juniors Ron Enyeart, Tom Gilchrist, Brad Havist, Kevin McQuilkin, and Ron Romanick.

Girls watch the birdie

Once again members of the girls' badminton team proved themselves strong by coming out on top. They have gone undefeated almost since the beginning of a Newport badminton team.

This year the number of girls trying out increased from last year. The team was very strong in both doubles and singles. Singles was once again dominated by returning seniors Terrie Rogers and Sue Gustafson, and Junior Faye Eken, who were also top seated last year.

Newport's badminton team continues to be

Team relations change

With time techniques may change, but the skills stay the same. The newest technique for the Boys' Soccer Team was the philosophy on coach—player relationships. Paul Mendes, a player for the Sounders and a Newport alumnus, was installed as an assistant coach. It was much easier for the guys to relate to Paul. There wasn't the teacher–student relationship. Paul Renkert, another Sounder, also helped to coach his former alma-mater earlier in the year. "The pair were a tremendous uplift to the team," remarked Coach Don Hershey.

Dedication was the name of the game. You've got to want it bad enough to go out and get it. Physically and mentally, the team was well rounded, tough and capable of handling anything. As Coach Hershey said, "It just depended on the attitude with which the situation was attacked. Anybody or any team is potentially capable; it just depends on where you place your priorities."

There were no real outstanding players on the team from Coach Kretz's point of view. "Each girl has a job to do out there, and she does it. But, each of the girls from both J.V. and varsity could be playing as a starter on varsity for another team."

Personal goals stressed

Track is an excellent chance for individuals to develop personal talent and demonstrate it against others in competition. Success in track depends on how much talent is present and how hard each person is willing to work to develop that talent. It is up to each student how far his talent and dedication will take him.

To have a good track team each individual must be dedicated and have the desire to work. But unlike other sports, an outstanding individual is not held back by a

"Individuals can develop their talents and become state champs," said Coach Dwaine Hatch, "if they're devoted."

1. Mark Ryan, senior, works hard at keeping a steady pace.

2. Sophomore Mike Musgrave races after being passed the baton.

3. Newport runners dash to reach the finish line.

4. Senior Steve Rands warms up at the discus throw.

5. Phil Simpkins, junior, practices the pole vault.

6. Two Newport runners are determined to finish ahead of the others.

7. Sophomore Marty Waiss masters the hurdles at a home meet.

8. Trying for a greater distance, Senior Terrance Scott works at the long jump.

Personal best achieved

Along with team spirit, the Girls' Track team members strived for their individual goals—their personal best. The team participated in six league meets, an All-City meet, and, in May, the championships.

Among the outstnading track competitors was Junior Michele Carver, in the 880, and the mile relay. Seniors Therese Brenner and Debbie Ford were exceptional in sprints and relays. The team's strength was in the running events.

Boys aim high

Mental attitude contributes greatly to success in the game of tennis, as do strategy and careful placing. All of these aspects of the game were practiced by this year's boys' tennis team.

Aiming to be top in the district, the team got off to a strong start. Coach Robert Cleland felt the strongest players were Scott Pearson, Steve Galvagno, and Gary Marshall. However, Coach Cleland said, "All

On their way to the top, the team had to face Mercer Island, Bellevue and Sammamish, their toughest competitors. But age and strength were the boys' strongest advantages.

1. Sophomore Gary Marshall finds a two-handed backhand more powerful.

2. Senior Mike Woerner attacks the ball fiercely.

Team has slow start

This year the Girls' Tennis Team got off to a slow start, but ended up in winning form. Practices were scheduled to begin before school started, but no one turned out. Once school began, though, nineteen dedicated girls showed up on the courts.

Four seniors, five juniors and ten sophomores made up the squad. Mr. Fran Drake, the girls' coach, said, "I was pleased with the enthusiasm. I feel the program will be strong in future years because we have many young players." The team's overall record was 7-3, with outstanding performances by Senior Marja Marshall (10-0), Junior Traci Cooke (9-1), Junior Sue Hannah (8-2), and a doubles team consisting of Junior Sue Rose and Senior Sandy Simpkins (7-3). Marja was team captain and also chosen Most Valuable Player. Junior Kim Murray received an award for Most Improved. Senior Sandy Simpkins again gained the title of Most Inspirational for the second time. She had received it once before in her sophomore year.

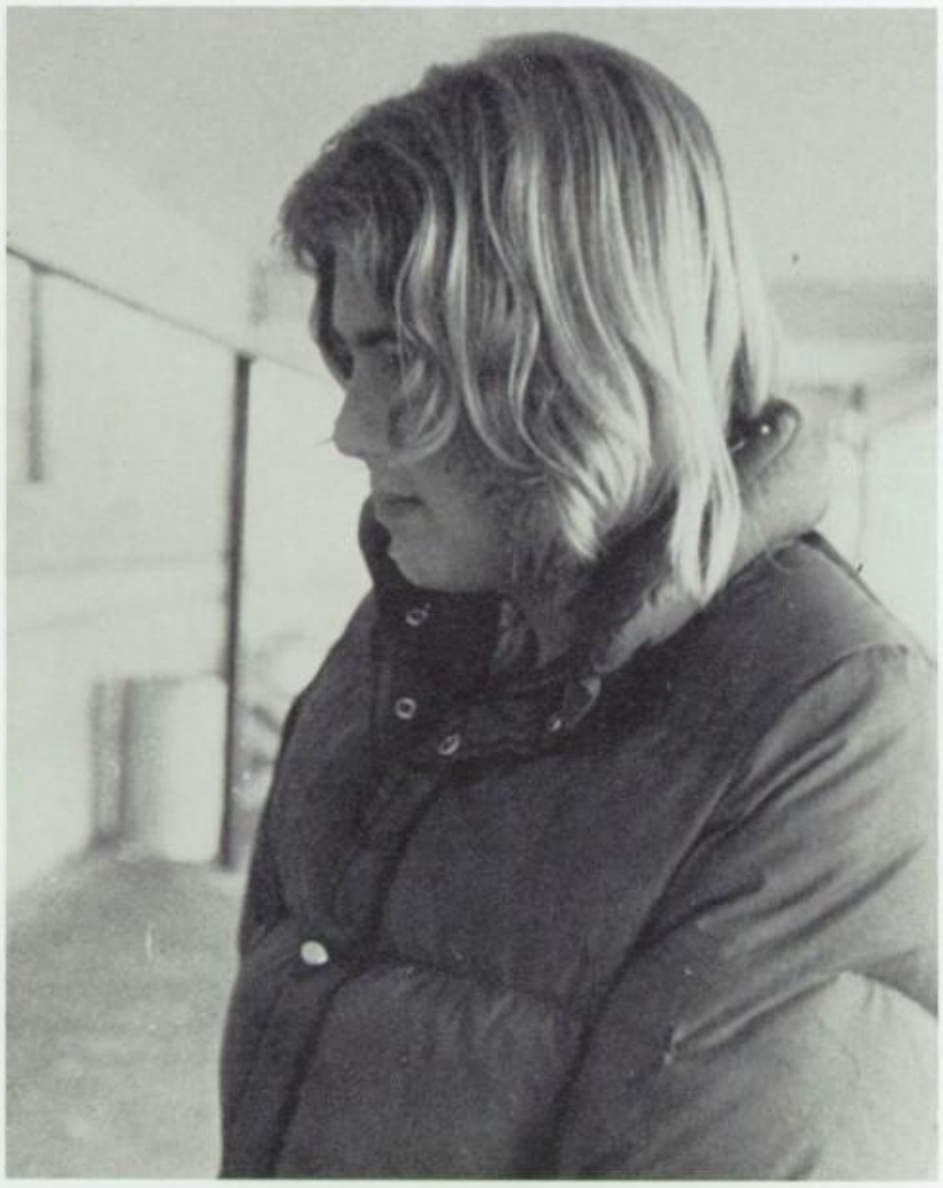
Newport's academic program is designed for reaching and reviewing. In science you can take a class as basic as Biology or as challenging as Animal Studies. One of the more popular courses was Ecology, in which students went on numerous field trips. English took on a new face with a number of new classes; some of these being Composition and Practical Writing. The overall program was reviewed as a success by the English faculty. The Math Department has as many different courses as any student would want to take. One of the courses taken by seniors was Math Summary, in which a review of the basic processes was covered. Out of all the required courses speech was one of the most popular among sophomores and juniors. They learned a great deal about communicating with their peers, as well as with parents and teachers. Overall, Newport's academic program can be as rewarding an experience as one could hope for.

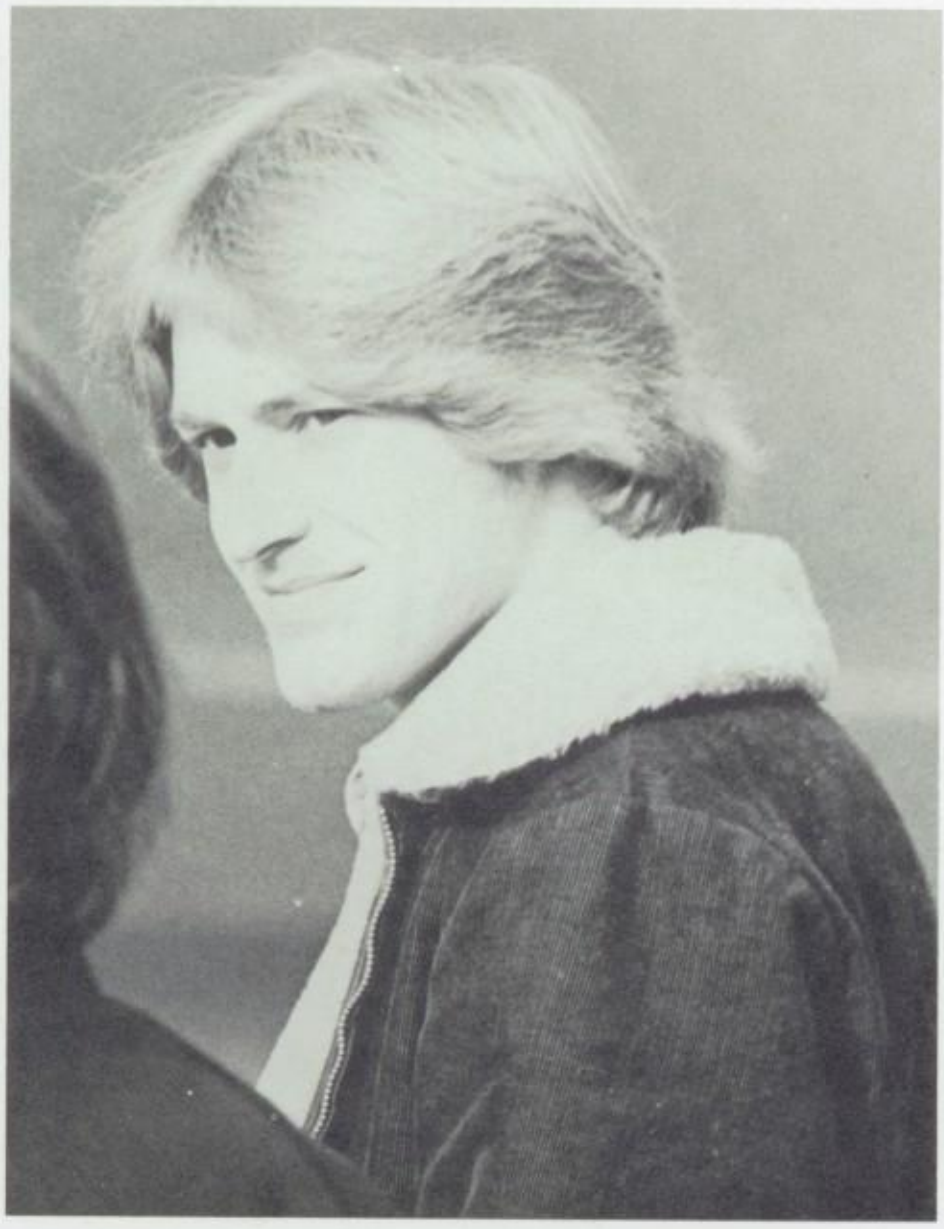
The half-time buzzer rang and the Drill Team took over the floor.

'How'd ya do on the U. S. World test?'

'Pretty good, but I had trouble on the essay.'

'Same with me.'





'There's my third hour
teacher. Maybe he's graded the papers.
I'll go ask.'

He became oblivious to the half time activities
as his eyes wandered over the stands and the
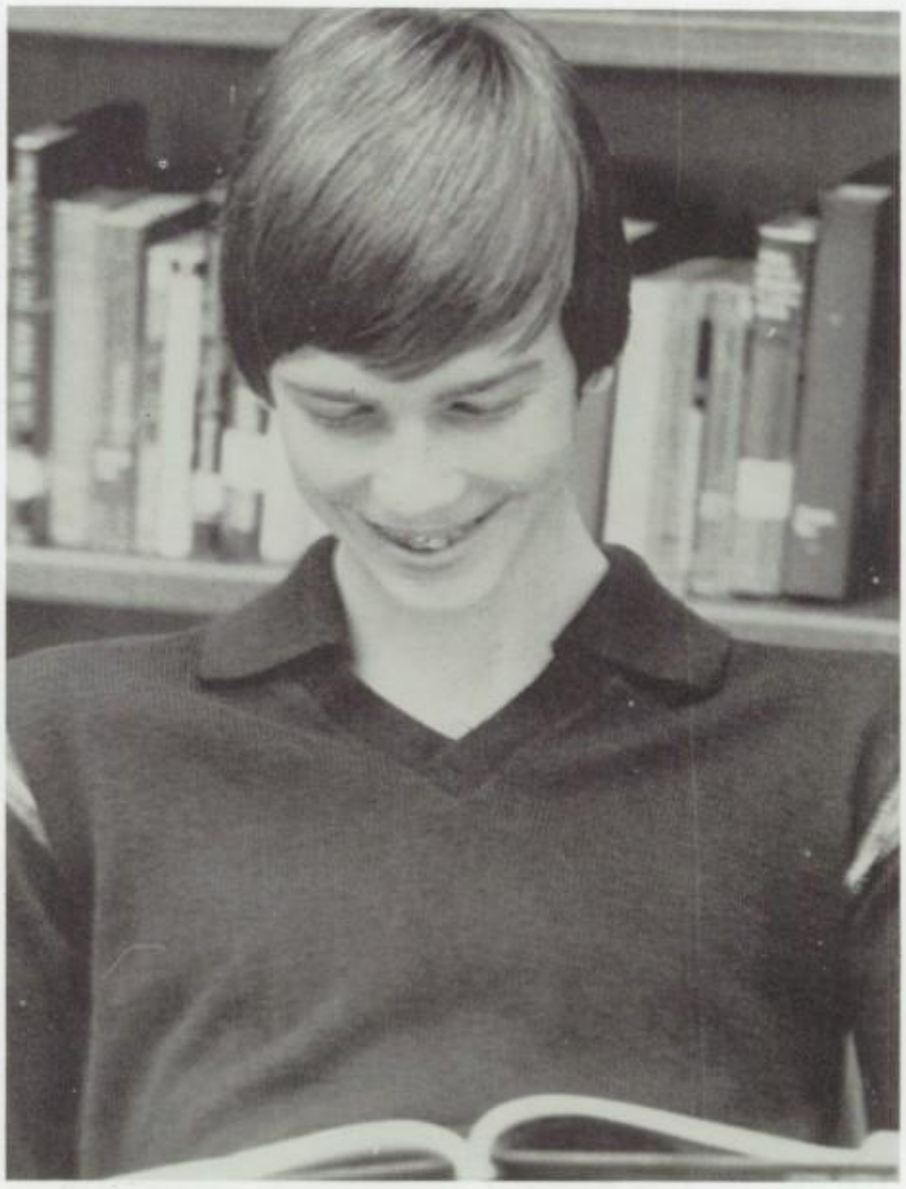
groups that filled them.



'What did ya get?'

'He thinks it was a B—he's not sure.'

As the players took their positions all
attention was directed to center court, and the second half got
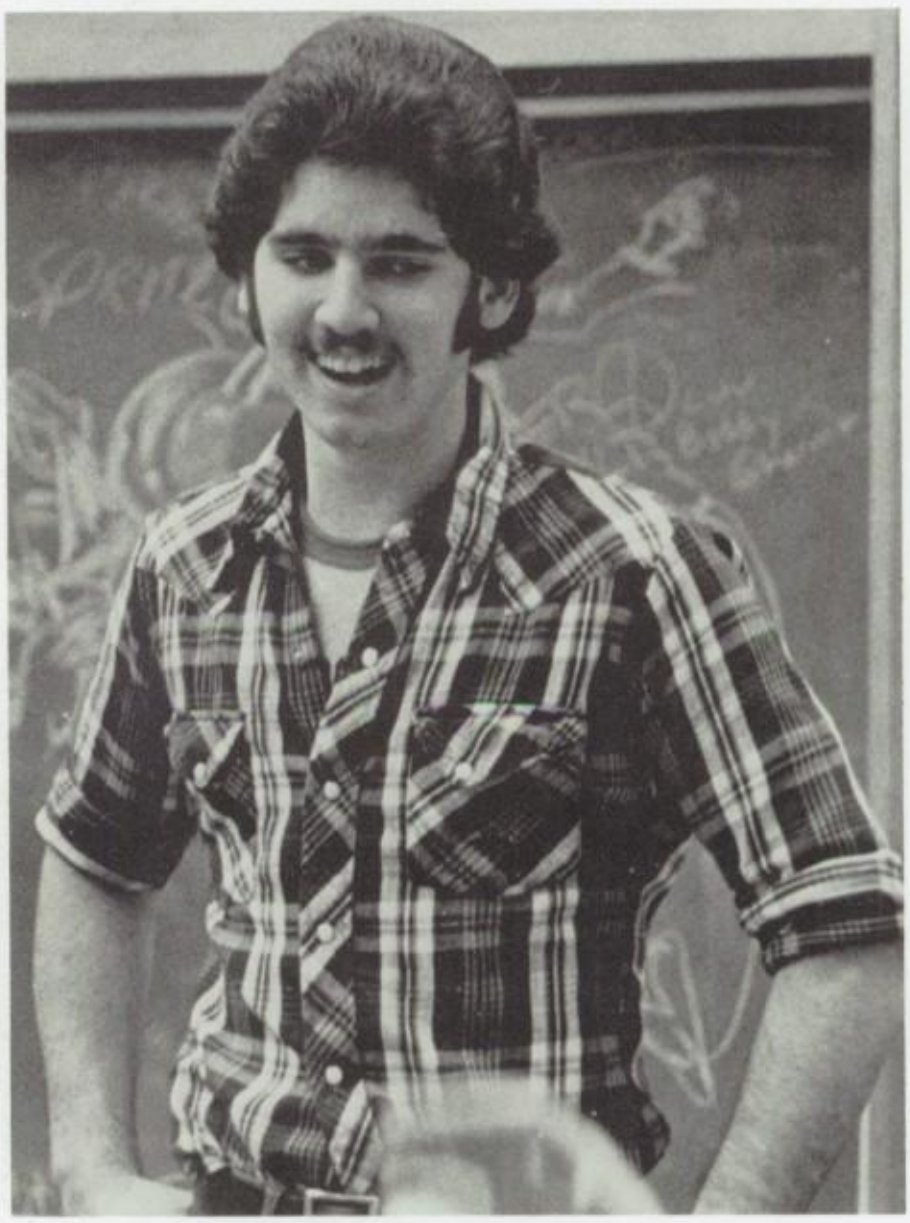
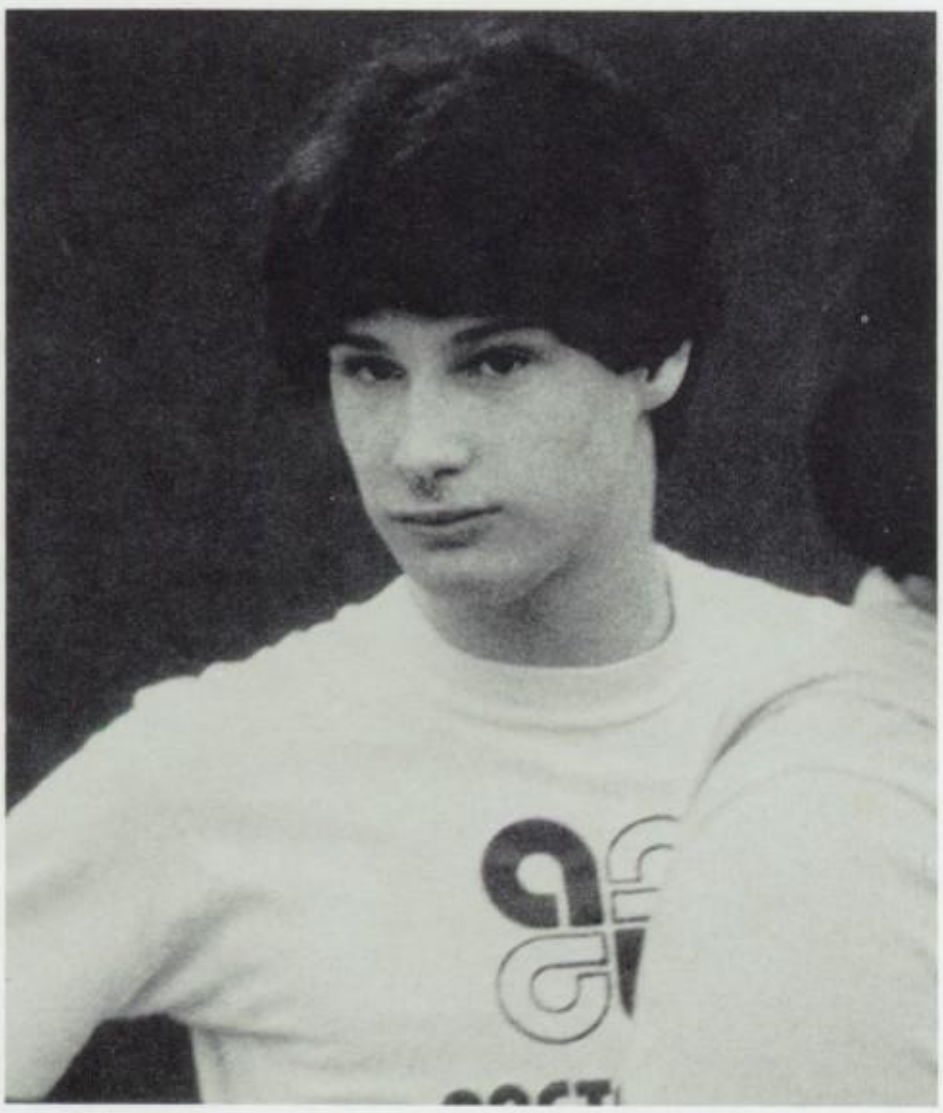
under way.





For awhile, the momentum
would switch from side
to side, but it soon
began to build in
the home team's favor.

'Too bad he fouled out.'

'Ya, in the closing minutes, but he was
the leading scorer.'

Problems are handled

Contact with all students, not just the problem ones, was something both the administration and the counselors were always trying to accomplish.

The administrators were confronted with problems every day and had to have answers for all of them. For instance, what to do about garbage clean up, and better landscaping around the school. These were two of the goals set by Mr. Ed Rosin, vice-principal.

Organization was not a problem for the administration this year. Everyone involved had their duties and they completed them.

"The climate, environment and the students are more school-oriented, both academically and activity-wise, than it has been in past years," commented Mr. Rosin.

The Counseling Center was an area designed to help all students with personal, academic and social problems, and they did it very well, according to Mr. Fred Freeburg.

4 5 6 7 8

Vocational and occupational information could be obtained all year long from the computer terminal, which is now owned by the Center.

"The Counseling Center was one of the warmest places in the building, both physically and humanly," commented Mr. Freeburg.

1. Mr. James Scott, principal, takes a breather from his busy schedule.

2. Ms. Karin Cathey, vice-principal, starts her day off with a smile.

3. Mr. Ed Rosin, vice-principal, keeps things running smoothly.

4. Ms. Marian Lamont, the business manager, works hard.

5. One of the counselors, Mr. Fred Freeburg, thumbs through some student records.

6. Mr. Mike Ritch, counselor, sighs after seeing one of his students.

7. Ms. Maja Gowan, counselor, is amused by a student's comment.

8. Mr. Ted Kirchhoff, counselor, talks to a concerned parent.

Office runs smoothly

The time is past when secretaries use a quill pen in their everyday work. They still make use of basic secretarial skills such as typing and filing, but now there's more. By their experience and efficiency, they can now be called Office Managers.

Secretaries are very important because they are the first to meet and deal with the public as they come in the door. Secretaries often act as liaison for the public, parents, teachers and the administration.

Few students realize the contributions our secretaries make daily. They continually work within the complex plan of running the program smoothly.

1. Ms. Karen Pinnick, counselor's secretary, is responsible for keeping the Counseling Center running smoothly.

3. Ms. Donna Carkeek is responsible for the paperwork that comes out of assistant principals' office.

4. Ms. Galloway, Senior Lisa Kutch, Junior Kathy Johnson and Sophomore Tina Templeman in the Attendance Office.

5. Ms. Elsie Galloway, attendance secretary, is the one who greets late students, let out those who want to go home early, and deals with those who were not where they were supposed to be.

6. Ms. Fran Troje, registrar, keeps student schedules and information straight.

7. Ms. Ruth Condello, faculty secretary, helps teachers make more work for you.

8. Ms. Sylvia Breshears, principal's secretary, is the one who keeps Mr. Scott's head on straight. She also is here all year long, doing all of the secretarial work for the summer.

Cooks really care

Did you ever suspect that someone at school cared about what you ate?

Believe it or not, the cooks did, and they planned menus that were nutritious. More yogurt, salads and fruits were also consumed by students. Ms. Peggy Berry, the head cook, commented, "Students are aware of the nutritional value of food and have good eating habits."

Custodians sweep up

After dances, Homecoming, pep assemblies, Tolo and more, who was always there to help clean up? The custodians, that's who.

Everyday, all day, eight men and one woman were busy cleaning up after students. No matter how messy we left a place, it was always cleaned up by the next day. In addition, they did such tasks as installing microphones, repairing machines and waxing floors.

When asked how he liked his job, Mr. Albert Thomas, an evening custodian stated, "I like it. The only drawback is when I see some student come toward me, I know exactly what they'll say, 'Hey Al, I need a favor.'"

1. Custodians relax before starting their work.

2. Night custodian Vern Ropp, enjoys a moment of rest.

3. Head custodian Ben Carroll, concentrates on the rest of his day.

4. Custodian Al Thomas, relaxes during a coffee break.

Class of 1979

Juniors have identity

Getting as many people involved as possible and establishing an identity were the major goals of the Junior Class Officers.

The class was advised by Mr. Dan Holden and the officers were President Janie Smith, Vice President Dorothy Hoffman, Secretary Cindy McLellan, Treasurer Kim Gillman and Historian Jenny Breitenfeldt.

"We want to make money, spend money and most importantly, have fun making and spending money," said Janie Smith, who was very excited about her class and its activities. They planned such events as candy sales, garage sales and a sports competition.

The Junior Officers all worked very well together and were happy to see their plans come through with lots of involvement.

1. Historian Jenny Breitenfeldt looks down to Newport.

2. Kim Gillman, treasurer, wades through the weeds.

3. Vice-President Dorothy Hoffman turns and smiles.

Math problems solved

When you got cross-eyed trying to figure out how many apples George had if he had one-seventeenth as many as Herman, who was twice as old as his brother . . . , wasn't it nice to know that there was somewhere you could go for help?

In the Math Resource Center (MRC), there was always someone willing to help you with any kind of math problem. "It is a place where people can get help with their problems or just study," observed Ms. Teresa McGuire, the new instructional assistant in the MRC. "I like to think of it as a place where they can find interesting things to do."

Ms. McGuire planned to make it a more interesting and fun place by adding more games and puzzles. She wanted to increase the number of students who used the MRC while still maintaining the same standard of service.

I.E. builds futures

Industrial Education builds for the future, helping students to realize their potential and gain experience that will open up many fields for them.

The Industrial Arts Department consisted of Mr. Hugh Cheeseman, Mr. Greg Coy and Mr. Dennis Kempf. Mr. Cheeseman instructed the metal working classes, power mechanics and he also helped in the construction trades. Mr. Coy, who has taught photography for six years here, was new to the drafting department. Mr. Dennis Kempf, a former teacher at Bellevue High, taught the woods classes.

There was growing interest through the year in Industrial Arts, but Mr. Kempf stated he would like to see more girls in his classes because, "Woods can be very pertinent in their lives too." He believes it is important for young people to get involved with woods because there is such a growing field in construction. Mr. Kempf said, "There are a lot of jobs out there related to wood."

The department, according to Mr. Kempf, had excellent equipment that matched any in the district and bettered most schools in the state.

1. A junior carefully sponges on the finishing touch.

2. Junior John McCullough contemplates the situation.

3. Soccer buddies Colleen McShane and Lisa Maybee giggle at the photographer.

4. Mr. Dennis Kempf takes a breather after helping a student with a wood project.

Cultures shared

Would you be able to communicate with a person from another country? Teaching this skill was the basic goal of the foreign language classes.

A new addition to the teaching staff was Alice Savitch. Ms. Savitch was born in Germany and later moved to Bolivia. She teaches both German and Spanish and is completely trilingual.

The Foreign Langauge Resource Center is a place where students can go for extra help with their assignments and to listen to tapes. Also there were some students who were in accelerated programs who met in the Center daily for class.

According to Mr. Lyle Nichols, department head, "The foreign language teachers and students have had an excellent year. I think, however, we all need a few weeks' vacation to get ready for another exciting year."

1. Juniors Kirk Parce and Amy Harper spend their study hall sitting on the radiators.

Business is booming

Many students are beginning to prepare themselves for the future, thus keeping the enrollment in the Business Education Department growing. Students are being trained in the areas of preparation, knowledge and skills for both their personal and vocational lives.

Data Processing and the Audio Visual Center were on trial last year and they worked out so well that they were made permanent this year. The Audio Visual Center is a cabinet full of 400 tapes and filmstrips, which cover forty or fifty categories. The topics range from thought problems to learning the metric system.

Mr. Al Dormaier, department head, said, "The department is continually updating its equipment. Office machines, such as programmable calculators, a computer terminal and graphics equipment, are used to train people to compete in the fast progressing business world."

1. Mr. Frank Herzog helps one of his students.

Visit the past and the future

"And now for a look into the past, present and — future."

This past year the Social Studies Department was mainly interested in strengthening the courses that were already offered. Mr. Bruno Pierini, chairman of this department, said that there is a new class on the drawing board right now. "Futures" is the title he gave it and it will be a look into the problems of the world and what will happen tomorrow. Hopes are that this class will be offered next year as a world studies requirement.

Mr. Pierini feels that the Social Studies Department offers a wide variety, instead of just the very minimum required courses. "This department is strong because of the many talented people we have," stated Mr. Pierini.

1. Junior Fran Gregory, Sophomore Scott Fuller and Senior Sharon Foster take notes while attentively listening.

2. Mr. Jim Lockerbie finds one of his student's papers amusing.

3. Current affairs is part of the semester study in Mr. Bob Mitchell's US/WORLD class.

4. Mr. Ken Beall explains to his Origins of Civilizations class the film they are about to see.

Science builds esteem

The Science Department doesn't mess around. The teachers have had to deal with very few accidents, and they want to keep it that way. The Department was also thoroughly inspected for safety and has now complied with the most recent safety regulations. As they say in the science wing, 'No experiment is worth a student's life or limb.'

"We always tried to impress upon the students that to fool around in the lab is dangerous," said Department Head Denis DuBois.

One major objective of science classes was to create a higher self-esteem for each student. The teachers firmly believed that every student should have the opportunity provided to believe in his intellectual capabilities and to feel a higher sense of self-worth.

They also stressed the point that science teachers and the science community is on the whole not monotonous; that there is something for everybody.

1. Mr. Mark Peterson is amused at a student's comical gesture.

2. Ms. Marcia Stuart, tries to control a grin as the photographer candidly snaps a picture.

3. Junior Randy Gray concentrates on drawing straight lines.

4. Junior Paul Luchino is too absorbed in his homework to notice the photographer.

5. Mr. Ed Ramey anxiously tries to stir a dormant intellect.

6. Juniors Marvin Eide and Scott Davison give the Computer Terminal a try.

Juniors choose electives

Did you notice extra confusion at registration when the Junior/Senior English class was no longer offered? The program changed this year for the students.

The year long Junior/Senior English was dropped and the students chose between a list of classes. A semester of a writing class and a semester of a literature class were required for graduation. Classes such as Composition, Expository Writing and Narrative Writing were just some of the classes offered under writing. Others, such as American Literature, British-Irish Literature, and Myth and Classical Literature were also offered.

The teachers seem to agree that the students felt they were learning more because they chose an area of interest or an area they needed help in.

The goals of the English Department vary, but as Mr. Robert Cleland said, he wants to use his understanding of the subject to teach students to apply what they learn in class to the contemporary world.

1. Ms. Kim Anthony is amused by a student's response.

2. Mr. Jack Wilson smiles inwardly while playing the part of an overseer.

3. Mr. Robert Cleland explains a written assignment to his class.

4. Bobbi Johnson, junior, has a very sullen look for the cameraman.

Skills are studied in reading

How often do you need to use reading skills each day? Practically every minute.

That is why passing a basic skills test is necessary for every student before graduating.

Department Head Mr. Irwin Sameth stated, "The whole country realizes that students possess minimum reading talent to cope with the world."

As a result, more basic skills courses were offered. These covered such things as how to read graphs, charts, maps and reference materials. The classes were relatively small—an average of 16 people per class—which enabled the students to receive more individual attention.

People who wanted to improve in finer skills, such as speed reading and comprehension, as well as basic skills, were also welcome to take the course.

1. Mr. Irwin Sameth is pleased with his students.

Media equipment updated

A lot of people thought the Media Center was where you went to get a film and projector. They were right, but it was much more than that. How many people, for example, knew that you could make copies of slides, make prints from microfilm, and dry-mount pictures for only the cost of the materials? These were just a few of the services available. Ms. Virginia Marl, chairperson of the Media Center, remarked, "We have everything but books and we aim to serve."

Other services available included loaning of albums and tapes, videotapes, microfilm and recording equipment. Among the many services that were new this year were closed-circuit videotape on two channels throughout the school (remember the lunch-time movies?) and a new wide-angled camera for the videotape machines.

Ms. Marl felt that the biggest problem was that people didn't know about the services that were available. "My biggest goal right now is to correct that."

1. Ms. Virginia Marl takes time out from her work in the Media Center to pose for the photographer.

2. Dave Carter enjoys another comment brought up in his speech class.

3. Tony Chalfant and Tom Gilchrist are amused at Tom's latest drawing.

4. The numbers most often seen on the Newport Spirit Banner were 1979.

5. Jeff Dao takes advantage of the Library for a quiet study area.

6. Juniors Andy Dalton and Kirk Parce discuss their next play.

Sophs are surprising

Sophomore (Saf-,mor): The beginner, the bottom, the lowest rung on the ladder.

Many a joke has been made about the sophomore; from being compared to man's best friend, all the way to being rated on a scale of 1-10 along Senior Hall. Well, how wrong you are this time!

The Class of 80 was in no way low, at the bottom, or even similar to our friend Spot. They reached new heights over the sophomore classes of the past. They led the float competition during Homecoming, and showed an exceptional amount of spirit at assemblies. Their football team also finished with the best record ever.

President Kellanne Henry stated, "I feel lucky to be a part of such an outgoing and spirited class. The adjustment is hard at first, but for our class it came especially easily."

1. The Sophomore Class gets a smile of approval from President Kellanne Henry.

2. Sophomore Eric Griffith takes time out from a busy day to take care of the little things.

3. Sophomore Class Officers: President Kellanne Henry, Secretary Shari Sheppard, Vice-President Sue Thompson, Historian Valerie Reynolds; not pictured is Historian Gina Griffith.

Sophs enjoy speech

Today's society revolves around communication and so many of the people never seem to get across in their message exactly what they intended to.

Mr. Bill Eyman, speech teacher, said that speech classes are no longer "speech" classes. They deal more with communication. People need help in thinking things out before speaking, and not assuming people can read their minds. To start from the bottom of the problem, according to Mr. Eyman, we need to improve self images and teach people "how to be nice to themselves." They need to think more positively, learn how to recognize good qualities and deal with bad ones.

Also included in the Speech and Drama Department are Beginning and Advanced Acting, which provide a creative outlet for students. The Drama Department sponsors the all school play, the all school musical and an all school variety show.

There is also a class offered called Technical Theatre for students who don't want to act but like to get into the scene by helping in such areas as lighting and sound effects.

Overall, a great deal of variety is offered by this department.

1. Mr. John Scannell gets a few chuckles as a response to another one of his amusing stories.

2. Mr. Bill Eyman has a serious discussion with one of his students.

3. Listening intently for the next instruction is a member of the Newport orchestra.

4. During a discussion Mr. Gary Walker calmly adds his point of view.

Drivers are trained

Responsibility—Hard work—A good attitude—A lot of free time. Traffic Safety, a class made up of mostly underclassmen, involves all of these things. It is a class set apart from other classes in that the state sets up a certain "lesson plan" that must be followed, and the teachers Mr. Darren Sipe and Mr. Mick DiRe follow it.

There are three parts to the lesson plan: the actual on the road driving, the classroom sessions, and the simulating machine. What is learned from these areas is directly applicable to the immediate needs of the students.

The Traffic Safety program is one where the student has more one-on-one time with the teacher and the teachers like to show them a lot of responsibility and a good attitude.

"Traffic Safety is the only class in the school that may mean the difference between life and death," commented Mr. DiRe.

1. Mr. Mick DiRe manages a nervous smile while waiting for a student.

2. Mr. Darren Sipe gives a student a shocked look after a comment was made.

3. Kirby Miller, sophomore, studies with immense concentration.

4. Sophomore Randy McDowell crams for a geography test.

5. Sophomore Susie Franko laughs at her teacher's joke.

6. Mr. Larry Hitchcock, driving instructor and athletic director, makes sure one of the simulating machines is in working order and properly secured.

Everyone needs art

There were various art programs, including the visual arts, crafts, theatre, music and literature, which invited students to be a part of the search for artistic expression that enriches all of our lives.

In Mr. John Grove's opinion, "Art resists tidy definition. As soon as someone decides what art is, someone else will expand our collective vision to a new horizon. Historically, art has both mirrored our vision and expanded it out of sight. It is this quality of the art that continues to invite all dimensions of human expression.

"Such lofty words may sound above and beyond us all, yet the potential for such aspirations begins with paint, clay, wood and metal, right here at Newport High School. Many young people have launched their artistic vision in such a humble place as this. Art can be a part of everyone's lives, for its many forms of expression is one of the greatest influences in our life."

1. Sophomore Ulrika Wahlstrom smiles while working in the library.

English changes

English started off with a bang when the English Department changed its program.

Sophomore English changed from a year-long to a one semester class, leaving the second semester open for the student's choice. These changes came about when the requirements were reviewed for the sophomores. Sophomores now have to pass a competency test containing writing skills and punctuation, as well as some usage before they graduate. The first semester was spent reviewing and improving their writing skills in Sophomore English and the second semester was spent in either a writing or literature class of the student's choice.

One goal of the Sophomore program was to teach students to do well with basic skills without over-emphasizing it.

1. Ms. Donna Hughes chuckles at a response given by one of her Sophomore English students.

2. Mr. Fran Drake answers one of his sophomore student's questions.

3. Dr. Fred Meitzer concentrates on adjusting a camera in the Broadcasting Room.

4. Ms. Jane Vosk glances at the cameraman for a picture.

P.E. becomes popular

Flag football — weight training — archery — figure contouring — floor hockey — soccer. These were but a few of the many P.E. courses offered this year. Participating students worked with some of the new equipment available, such as the new Weight-Training Room.

Different school districts around the state came to visit Newport's P.E. department. Mr. Lincoln, Department chairman was pleased with the quality P.E. program that has been receiving a lot of recognition throughout the state.

1. Heading back to the locker room after another class is Ms. Kathy Hutton.

2. Mr. Don Hershey times a student during his floor hockey class.

3. Mr. Bill Bloomer watches his students progress on the field.

4. Mr. Ray Lincoln is pleased with the quality P.E. courses offered at Newport.

5. Cramming homework is a familiar sight around Newport.

6. Ms. Judy Olsen poses for the camera after her class.

Changes seen in Library

Shhhh! Who me? Talking? Not any more; not after the library arrangement was changed at the beginning of the year. The librarians and a group of concerned students and teachers devised a way to keep the noise level down to a minimum. They took away tables and arranged the Library so they could keep more of an eye on the students and take care of those who were being noisy. As a result, there seemed to be less noise, and the librarians helped more students on the whole.

Since the fire, things have been going well. According to Mr. Dave Ticen, in about one half year the Library will have the amount of books that they need. When asked how the students have adjusted to the shortage of materials, he said, "I think students have adapted, and gotten along well. I'm happy with the way it's improved."

1. Becky Lamatao raises her hand in Speech class.

2. Ms. Fran Apetz checks a card in the card catalogue.

3. Mr. Dave Ticen glances up from his book to talk to a student.

4. Ms. June Wehrwein is captured while doing some library work.

5. Sophomore Carla Hatcher turns to talk to a friend.

Musicians prosper

Again, the dynamic sounds of the Music Department's performing groups rang through the halls in preparation for their numerous concerts and contests. Taught by Mr. Robert Bailey, Mr. John Cox, and Mr. George Harshbarger, the groups ranged from the Wind Ensemble or "band" sound to the coordinated voices of the Newport Singers. These classes, in addition to nine other music oriented courses had a total of 346 students involved.

"Music is an important part of a student's life," commented Mr. Robert Bailey, "it is psychologically with a person all the time."

1. Sophomore Karen Copenhaver is caught by the photographer as she flashes an amused smile.

2. Terry Uht, sophomore, listens to some helpful advice from a friend while working in the library.

3. Mr. George Harshbarger, choir director, sings along as he leads his students through a series of chords.

4. Band Director Mr. Robert Bailey listens intently as one of his trumpet players works his way through a piece of music.

5. Mr. John Cox, demonstrates a new chord to a member of the Guitar class.

Biology is popular

Go ahead, admit it. You liked Biology. The fact is, out of all the science courses offered, Biology had the biggest enrollment.

"People like to learn about themselves; get a feeling for why they are the way they are." Biology teacher Joan Davis suggested that this may be the reason for the popularity of the course.

A high percentage of the class time was spent in labs, in which cells, genetics, physiology, energy, and other subjects were studied.

This year the Biology teachers strived to expand the energy unit, due to the current energy shortage.

Ms. Davis explained, "We're trying to raise the level of student awareness, that there are alternative sources of energy to oil."

1. Biology teacher Denis DuBois pauses during a busy day.

2. Randy Nash takes a break during speech class.

3. Mr. Dan Holden talks with a student in his Integrated Science class.

4. Ms. Joan Davis is always interested in the discoveries of her Biology students.

5. Enjoying another speech class is Russ Gillam.

Sophs take on math

Everyone knows that being a sophomore can be hard, and it was no different for the Class of 1980. While they were getting used to more homework, more tests, and new teachers, the sophomores also took a wide variety of math classes, ranging from Lab Geometry and Special Algebra to Algebra 3/4 and Algebra/Trigonometry.

The Math Department tried to make life easier for the sophomore. "We take time to help sophomores get into the high school life," Ms. Jan DeLacy, Department Chairperson said. "One of our goals is to acquaint the sophomores with the Math Department so that we can be of use to them," she concluded.

1. Mr. Ted Montgomery looks bright-eyed and bushy-tailed.

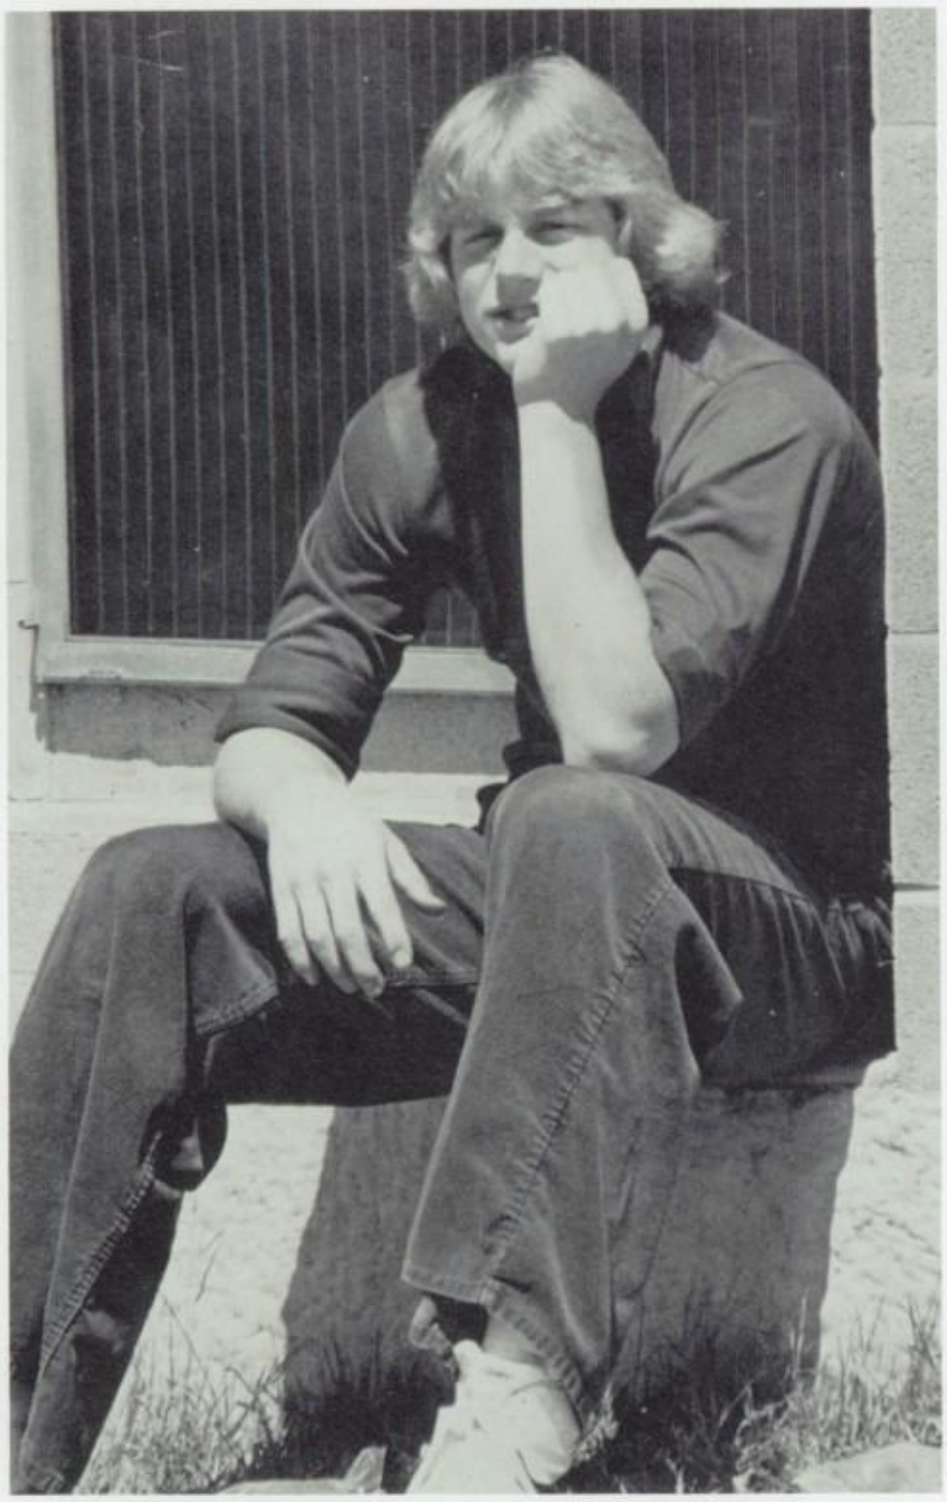
2. Dr. Richard Singletary is deep in concentration while working on a math problem.

3. Ms. Jan DeLacy takes time out from her work to pose for the photographer.

4. Sophomore Peter Russell seems to be having problems tying a knot in a rope.

As the end of the game neared it became apparent that Newport would once again be victorious.

The two filtered out the doors with the rest of the crowd.



'The team looked pretty sharp tonight.'

'Ya we really played good. Where'd ya park?'

'Up in the visitors so we could hit the road and make our getaway.'

They drove over
the same familiar road,
as they had done
so many times before;
each was immersed
in his own thoughts.
They pulled into the
driveway and said
their casual goodbyes.

He put the car into gear and proceeded
to his own house.

He drove up and parked. As he looked at the house, the
one light in the living room
awaited him.

He decided not to go in right away . . .

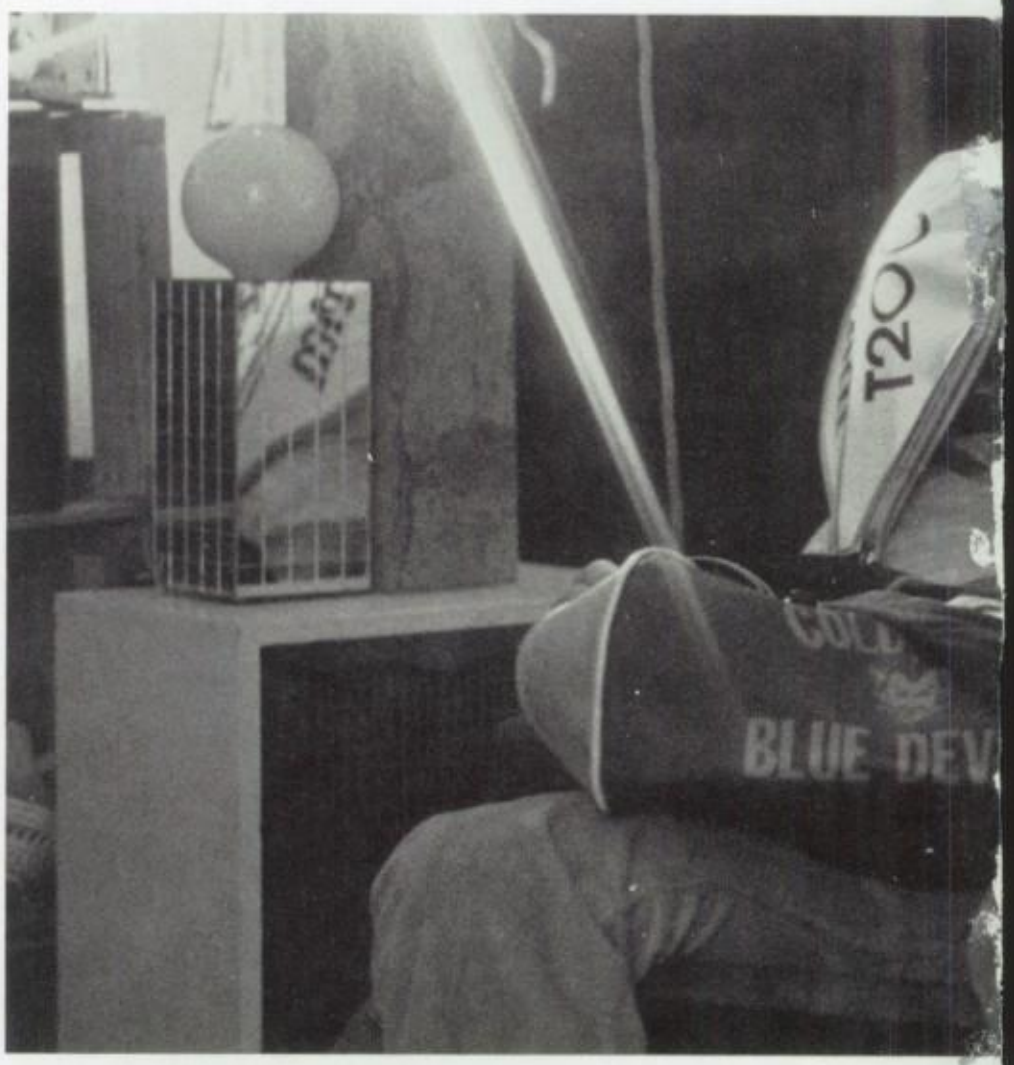
He turned his back and began to walk.

His thoughts reflected back to that day when he walked along the beach.

The entire year's experiences began to blend together into a colorful



Kaleidoscope.

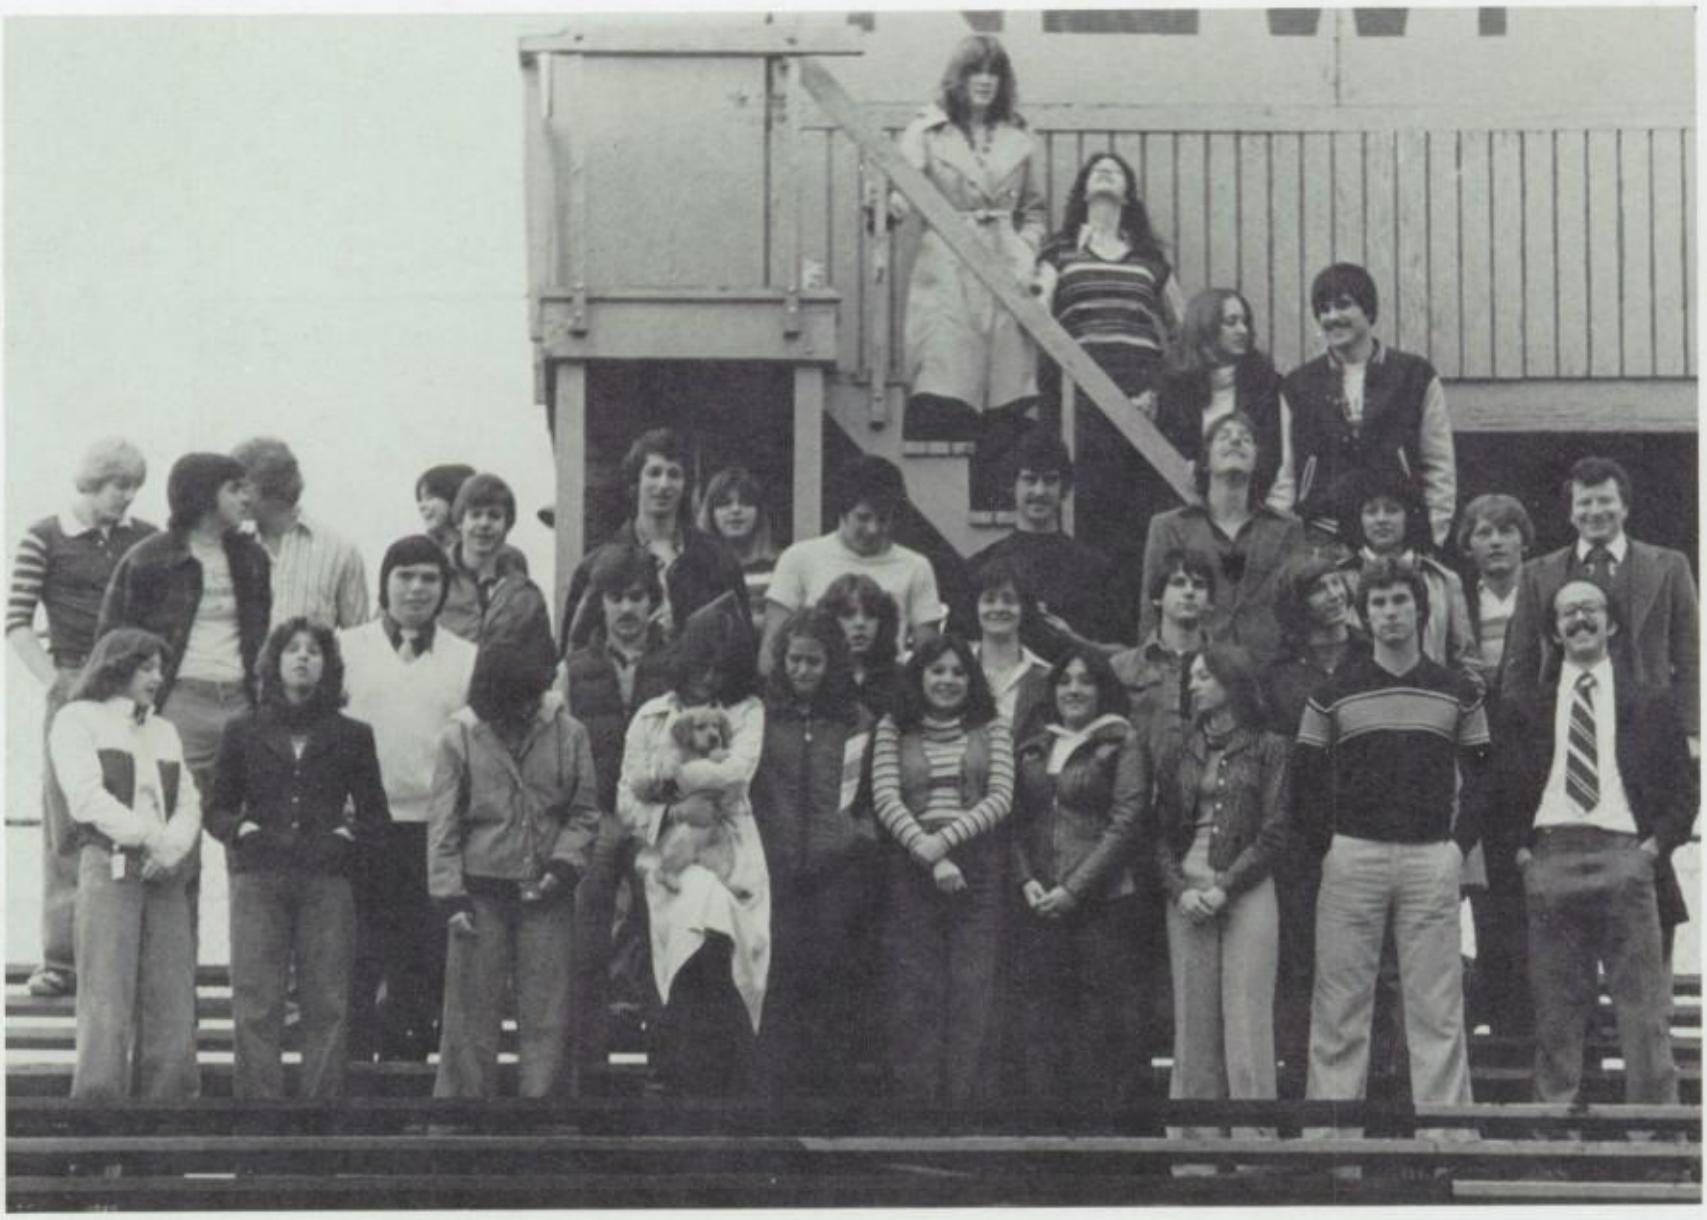
DECA. . .

. . . is off and running



Members of the 1977-78 DECA Club

Our DECA Club is an extension of the General Marketing and Distributive Education classes.

In class we study what makes a successful business.

These DECA students transform classroom theory into actual practice by visiting, taking over, and being employed by local businesses.

'The Accolade'

"Now came the moment for which everyone was waiting. The young man went forward to the lord who was to make him a knight and knelt before him with clasped hands. The lord questioned him somewhat in this wise: 'Why do you wish to be made a knight? Is it that men may show you honor?' On the young man's declaring that he had no such wishes, both knights and ladies united in arming him. The golden spurs came first, then the other pieces of armor, and last of all the sword. The lord then gave him the accolade, sometimes a hearty blow with the hand or even the clenched fist. This was followed by the charge to be brave, ready, and loyal . . . So it was . . . in the ceremony of making a knight . . ." From Tappan, When Knights Were Bold.
